ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This volume could not have come to publication without the cooperation and the contributions of a number of individuals and institutions. It is fitting that I first recognize the support of their royal highnesses K.G.P.A.A. Mangkunagara IX and the late K.G.P.A.A. Mangkunagara VIII, the rulers of the Mangkunagaran Palace who graciously granted me permission to work in their manuscript collection. Special gratitude is also due to the late K.R.M.T.H. Sanyoto Sutopo Kusumohatmodjo (Head of Palace Affairs at the Mangkunagaran) to whose memory this book is dedicated. Without his initiative this volume and the others in this series would never have been produced. I deeply regret that he did not live to see their publication. It was over twenty years ago when I was just beginning my studies of Javanese manuscript literature that Bp. Sanyoto first came to me with the idea he had formulated to preserve the endangered Mangkunagaran manuscript heritage on microfilm. When I later shared his idea with my professor at Cornell University, David K. Wyatt, he persuaded me that we should to apply to the National Endowment for the Humanities for a preservation grant. Our proposal was accepted, and in 1980 the Surakarta Manuscript Project came into existence. Over the course of the next five years the project precataloged and filmed over 700,000 pages of manuscript materials in four Surakarta repositories (housed in the Mangkunagaran Palace, the Karaton Surakarta, the Radyapustaka Museum, and the home of K.P.T. Hardjonagoro). Bp. Sanyoto, who acted as my personal sponsor for that entire period of intensive field work (1980–85), was in effect a mainstay of our preservation activities in all these Surakarta repositories. Because of his dedication and foresight, the Javanese-language manuscript materials that he so cherished have both been preserved for posterity and been made more accessible to a much wider readership (see plate 1).

Over the course of my several years work in the Mangkunagaran library (1980–85 and summers 1993, 1996, 1997), the staff of the Reksa Pustaka were always helpful and generous with their time. Special thanks are due to the late K.R.T. Muhammad Husodo Pringgokusumo (Head of the Reksa Pustaka Library) and to K.R. Ayu Hilmiyah Darmawan Pontjowolo (Secretary of the Cultural Section of the Mangkunagaran Palace). I am also grateful to G.P.H. Herwasto Koesoemo (Head of the Cultural Section), K.R.M.T.H. Sundoro Widyodipuro (Vice-Head of the Cultural Section), K.R.Ngt.T. Siti Koestini Soemarti (current Head of the Reksa Pustaka), as well as to the rest of the Reksa Pustaka staff: R.Ay.Ng. Sri Kayati Sutarmo, M.Ng. Suyatno Trunosuroto, R.Ay.Ng. Amani Puji Astuti, K.R.T. Widiyatmo Sontodipuro, M.Ng. Supardi Hadisuparto, M.Dm. Basuki, Dra.R.Ngt.Ng. Darweni, the late R.Ng. Mulyadi Mulyohutomo, the late R. Ng. Suroyo Tarusuwardjo, the late R.Ng. Maryono Taruno, the late M.Dm. Hardjosarmanto, the late R.Ng. Sudjono, and the late R.M. Said.

Alan H. Feinstein's contribution to the preparation of this volume has been invaluable. Not only did he discover, hidden away in a dusty corner of the Reksa Pustaka office, a great many of the manuscripts on dance here described, he also prepared detailed notes on a significant number of the collection's manuscripts on traditional musical and dance performance. Those notes were of great assistance to me in the preparation of this volume. Titin Masturoh, Jayèng Susarno, and Ambyah assisted in the identification of several texts written in Arabic (Pégon) script, and R.M. Ng. Atmowidodo prepared notes on several manuscripts. I. Kuntoro Wiryamartana and M. C. Ricklefs also offered some helpful suggestions.

I am of course indebted to those whose bibliographical work on Javanese manuscripts preceded mine. Unpublished notes prepared by the late R. Tanoyo on a number of Reksa Pustaka volumes were extremely helpful to me at the outset of my work in the field. I also gratefully acknowledge the works of the late R. Poerwa Soewignja, R. Wirawangsa, R.M.Ng. Poerbatjaraka, and Theodore G. Th. Pigeaud. More recent bibliographic works by M. C. Ricklefs, Peter Carey, Timothy Behrend, and Titik Pudjiastuti have also been helpful.

I am deeply grateful to the technical staff of the Surakarta Manuscript Project: R. Pranadi Hartawiryana, Alan H. Feinstein, and Mulyoto, for their countless hours of care and patience in the filming of these many manuscripts. Thanks are also due to M. Husni Djasara and Bambang Hening Tjipto, of the preservation unit of the Indonesian National Archives, where the films were processed.

Dr. Haryati Soebadio, former Director General of the Indonesian Ministry of Education and Culture, was always very supportive of my work with the manuscripts of Surakarta. I am also grateful to Soemartini, former Director of the Indonesian National Archives, for her cooperation. H. S. Soemaryono made the microfilm camera of the Indonesian National Press Monument available to the Surakarta Manuscript Project field team.

John C. Crawford and Harriet Cohan of the Jakarta Library of Congress assisted in the intercontinental shipment of the microfilms. Deborah Homsher and, before her, Audrey Kahin and Dolina Millar, of the Cornell Modern Indonesia Project and Southeast Asia Program Publications have been very helpful, supportive, and patient.

I am deeply grateful to David Wyatt, who has given generously of his time, energy, and expertise over the course of many years to support my work on these Javanese manuscripts. His friendship has sustained me at several difficult points, and his example has inspired me. I am also very grateful to Oliver Wolters for his guidance and to John Pemberton for his assistance in the preparation of these volumes.

The manuscripts described in this volume were filmed with funds provided by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Cornell University Southeast Asia Program. The publication of this volume and others in this series is supported with a grant from the Henry Luce Foundation.

A NOTE ON SPELLING

My transliteration of the Javanese script in which the original manuscripts are inscribed follows, with some exceptions, the system standard in Indonesia today. The exceptions are as follows:

1. I distinguish the taling (é or è) from the pepet (e), as these signs mark phonemic differences in the Javanese language. The choice between é and è depends upon pronunciation and follows the lead of Poerwadarminta's Baoesastra Djawa (Groningen: Wolters, 1939).

2. Nasalizations (ng—) at the beginning of vowel initial words are not routinely eliminated.

3. Although, for the sake of indexing, I do engage in some spelling standardization of manuscript titles for the primary bibliographical entry, I make no attempt to "correct" scribal "mistakes" or variations in my transliterations of the "title as it appears."

4. I transliterate the names of writers faithfully from the original Javanese script signatures. I do not, for example, follow the standard academic Javanological spelling of the name of "the seal of the pujongga" as "Ranggawarsita." The official rationale given for this "perfected spelling" of the poet's name is that the vowel in the first syllable of the word rangga is properly an a rather than an o. Ronggawarsita, however, initiated his signature with the taling-tarung, and I follow his usage.

INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME 2: MANUSCRIPTS OF THE MANGKUNAGARAN PALACE

THE LIBRARY OF THE MANGKUNAGARAN PALACE: THE REKSA PUSTAKA

In March 1757, the warrior-prince K.P.A. Mangkunagara (r. Surakarta 1757–95) finally submitted to the rulers of the Karaton Surakarta, the Karaton Yogyakarta, and the Dutch East India Company (V.O.C.), thus ending his sixteen-year-long armed rebellion against his royal Javanese kinsmen and the Dutch traders with whom they had become entangled. This submission followed by two years the signing of the Giyanti treaty, the famous 1755 treaty that split the old kingdom of Mataram between Mangkunagara's cousin, Pakubuwana III (r. Karaton Surakarta 1749–88), and his uncle and erstwhile comrade-in-arms, Mangkubumi (Hamengkubuwana I, r. Karaton Yogyakarta 1755–92). Prince Mangkunagara was granted control of some 4,000 cacah (roughly, "households") and a princely residence in the royal city of Surakarta, where he was to rule as a semi-autonomous prince under the Pakubuwanan rulers of the Karaton Surakarta. Only in 1803 under Prangwadana II, the first Mangkunagara's grandson and successor, was the Mangkunagaran house granted rights of permanent hereditary succession. The year 1803 coincidentally marked the establishment of the Mangkunagaran Legiun, an armed militia that would serve well the European, mostly Dutch, colonial governments that would control Java over the subsequent 139 years.

The Reksa Pustaka, now the library that houses the manuscripts described in this catalog, was instituted in 1867, some 110 years after the foundation of the Mangkunagaran principality. Mangkunagara IV (r. 1853–81), a renowned poet, scholar, administrator, entrepreneur, statesman, and soldier, was the man who founded this important establishment of Javanese scholarship. The Reksa Pustaka office originally formed a royal archive, and it was first administered not by royal scribes but by the palace police (wimbasara). But before long the scholarly Mangkunagara IV had directed this office to focus its attentions on his growing collection of manuscripts and published books: by 1875 the Reksa Pustaka had become a kind of informal lending library for Mangkunagaran nobility and courtiers (see MN 224A). Then in 1877 the prince formally instituted his library, and the functionaries of the Reksa Pustaka became the official custodians of his collection. These men were, then, the librarians of the first institutionalized library in the Indies founded and administered by native Javanese subjects. Among the librarians' first tasks was to compile a catalog of the repository's holdings; this catalog (MN 707), comprising a shelf-list of some 304 volumes (29 of which are identified as published works), was completed on November 26, 1877. The original collection formed a diverse selection of works, including histories (of Java, of Islam, and of Napoleon), wayang play scripts, translations of the Bible, didactic poetry, legends, and histories of Islamic saints and heroes.

The Reksa Pustaka flourished during the reign of Mangkunagara IV's grandson, Prince Mangkunagara VII (r. 1916–44). In addition to many new acquisitions, there was, under the auspices of this modernizing, Western-educated prince, a general reorganization of the collection. He employed the Surakarta literatus R. Tanoyo to organize his manuscript holdings. Tanoyo, who had worked with the Dutch philologist Th. Pigeaud in the manuscript repository of the Yogyakartan Sonobudoyo Museum in the late Dutch colonial period, was active in the Mangkunagaran library during the Japanese occupation and the early revolutionary period. During these years (1943–46) he produced a useful descriptive catalog of a selection of the Mangkunagaran palace manuscripts (MN 706). The library was again reorganized in the late 1970s and early 1980s under the leadership of its then-librarian, K.R.T. Muhammad Husodo Pringgokusumo, and the enthusiastic patronage of the then-head of Palace Affairs, K.R.M.T.H. Sanyoto Sutopo Kusumahatmodjo. The present head of Reksa Pustaka library is K.R.Ngt.T. Siti Kustini Sumardi. She works under the direction of K.R.Ay. Hilmiyah Darmawan Pontjowolo, Secretary of the Cultural Section (Kabupatèn Reksabudaya) of the Mangkunagaran. The Head and Vice-head of the Mangkunagaran Palace's Cultural Section are G.P.H. Herwasto Kusumo and K.R.M.T.H. Soendoro Widyodipoero respectively.

The Reksa Pustaka library is located in the upper story of a two-story structure just to the east of the main ceremonial pavilion (pendhapa) of the palace (see plates 2 and 3). It is provided with a serviceable reading room and with a helpful and well-informed staff. Today the collection boasts over ten thousand volumes, approximately one thousand of which are Javanese language manuscripts.

The manuscripts housed in the Mangkunagaran library have seen and still see much use; they are in various states of decrepitude. Although some remain relatively sound, many of the manuscripts are in deplorable condition. Some of these manuscripts were in too poor a condition to be filmed by the Surakarta Manuscript Project of the early 1980s, a manuscript preservation project that was funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and Cornell University. Because these manuscripts could not be filmed, content descriptions of them are not included in the present volume. Other severely damaged manuscripts were painstakingly repieced, page by page, for filming, and descriptions of them are here recorded. Some of these damaged manuscripts were later physically restored during the Ford Foundation funded "Proyek Manuskrip Surakarta" that followed the Cornell University project.[1] Many of the manuscripts have been and are being transliterated into Latin script by the dedicated Reksa Pustaka staff. The manuscript collection is provided with an Indonesian-language card catalog that I prepared in 1982–83; the cards are indexed by title, author, and subject. The library also has multiple shelf-lists prepared by the Reksa Pustaka staff to aid readers in locating materials.

The present volume describes the contents of some 2,745 titles contained in the 944 volumes (or, sometimes, bundles) of manuscript materials that were filmed under the auspices of Cornell University's Surakarta Manuscript Project. The filmed manuscripts encompass a wide range of materials, including encyclopedic histories of classical Java, comprehensive dynastic histories of premodern Java, indigenous genealogical charts in the distinctive parisawuli rice-stalk form (see plate 4), extensive court diaries extending well into the twentieth century, cosmogonies, treatises of law, archival materials, works of Sufi poetry, histories of the Islamic saints, guides to Islamic practice and belief, catalogs of calligraphic talismans (see plate 5) and of keris patterns (see plate 6), works of calendrical divination (see plate 7), elaborate dance choreographies, musical scores, illuminated wayang romances (see plate 8), and wayang playscripts.

The Reksa Pustaka boasts what is no doubt the world's most extensive collection in manuscript of the famous Pustaka Raja ("Book of Kings"), an encyclopedic history of Java (from the Creation through the late eighteenth century) that is attributed to the revered nineteenth-century Karaton Surakarta poet R. Ng. Ronggawarsita. Not including its also extensive holdings in verse or wayang playscript adaptations of Ronggawarsita's original prose text, the Reksa Pustaka houses some 103 Pustaka Raja volumes (totaling 67,259 pages in MS) of this seminal universal history (see notes to MN 8 Series). The library also enjoys extraordinary breadth and depth in its holdings on traditional Javanese theatrical traditions (wayang kulit, wayang wong, and dance). The holdings of historical materials are impressive, and the repository boasts a number of unique works of great historical and cultural value. For example, the library claims a rare autograph manuscript of Mangkunagara I, founder of the Mangkunagaran house (MN 222A). This small leather-bound volume, a compilation of thirteen texts, includes readings from the Qur'ân, a history of the Islamic prophets, speculative Sufi lyrics on the nature of man, and a concise narrative history of Prince Mangkunagara's military and political campaigns. Also of note are contemporaneous historical notes on the political careers of Pakubuwana IV (MN 262B) and Mangkunagara IV (MN 224). A number of Mangkunagara IV's poetic works, some in draft form, are housed in this collection (see, for example, MN 393–393A). One of these drafts, a history of Napoleon Bonaparte, was apparently worked in collaboration with the prince's friend, R.Ng. Ronggawarsita (MN 276). Included in the filmed materials are selected materials from the Mangkunagaran archives, including original diplomatic correspondence and number of original treaties; these materials date from 1787 to 1947 (MN 719–724).

THE MANUSCRIPT DESCRIPTIONS

The manuscript descriptions in this volume include information on titles, authors, dates and places of composition, dates and places of inscription, and identities of scribes. Also provided are subject heading strings, sometimes multiple, for every title identified. The entries include notes on the physical size and condition of the manuscripts as well as descriptions of scripts and scribal styles, papers, and watermarks. Concise synopses of contents are provided for every manuscript title, including notes on each of the multiple titles bound together in any compilation. Included in the descriptive notes are discussions of the manuscripts' colophons and any other internal evidence determinative of provenance, authorship, transmission, or past ownership. Often provided are cross-references to comparable texts in the same or other Surakarta repositories as well as to texts described in previous manuscript catalogues and bibliographical guides such as Pigeaud's Literature of Java, Poerbatjaraka's Kapustakan Jawi and Indonesische Handschriften, R. Tanoyo's Pratélanipun Serat-serat Basa lan Sastra Jawi Seratan Tangan ingkang Sumimpen Wonten ing Kantor Reksa Pustaka Mangkunagaran (MN 706), and R. Poerwa Soewignja and R. Wirawangsa's Pratélan Kawontenaning Boekoe-boekoe Basa Djawi.

History. Java - 1735–1742 -- Kartasura, Pacinan
Literary studies. Literati
Wayang. History

Javanese history, 1735–42 (1660–67 candra). Prose. Kartasura history during the reign of Pakubuwana II, including Pacinan history (Tanoyo, p. 28, no. 84; MN 706).

The sons of the exiled Prince Mangkunagara are given new names and positions at court. The eldest of these sons (the future Mangkunagara I) is called R. Suryakusuma. Featured in this volume is an account of the Chinese uprisings in Batavia and in Central Java (see for example, MS p. 16 ff., p. 64 ff., p. 565 ff., p. 630 ff.) An interesting passage (MS p. 408 ff.) discusses Pakubuwana II's involvement in theatrical performance (wayang wong Ménak). There are numerous passages that concern prophecies, signs, and rumors of momentous change. Of special interest are: a prophecy concerning the move of the divine light (pulung) of royal authority to the Dutch (MS p. 453), the young Yasadipura I's interpretation of a dream presaging the move of the kraton to Surakarta (MS p. 603), and the prophecy revealed by Pakubuwana II's dying mother (Kangjeng Ratu Ageng) concerning the future greatness of her step-son, Prince Mangkubumi (MS p. 613). Also treated is the birth of Lara Beruk (a commoner who was later to become the beloved queen of Pakubuwana III and the mother of Pakubuwana IV) (MS p. 544 ff.). There are notes on the young Yasadipura I and his father (see MS p. 536 ff.).

Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn script. MS leaves numbered 1–797; page following p. 114 not numbered, no p.#s 133, 365–66, 421, p.#s 313, 337–38, 429, 683–84 x 2.

MS is in extremely fragile condition.

MS has been transliterated (MN 89 TT).

ON SURAKARTA MANUSCRIPT PROJECT (SMP) COLLATION

Project numbers. The descriptions are collated according to their project numbers. These numbers are preceded by abbreviations designating the respective repositories: MN for manuscripts of the Mangkunagaran's Reksa Pustaka, KS for manuscripts of the Karaton Surakarta's Sasana Pustaka, RP for manuscripts of the Museum Radyapustaka and HN for Hardjonagoro's collection. For the most part, these numbers proceed thematically according to subject. The enumeration for the Mangkunagaran manuscripts is, however, somewhat less consistent in its thematic progression than that for the other collections. Time and experience are noble teachers: the Mangkunagaran repository was where I began my manuscript cataloging in Surakarta. A number of these project numbers have appended letters (e.g., MN 224A, MN 224B, MN 224C, etc.) These appended letters were used for volumes located late in the project which were thematically closely related to volumes that had been previously assigned numbers and filmed. The notation TT (e.g., MN 86 TT) indicates "typed transliteration"; HT (e.g., MN 115A/HT) indicates "hand-written transliteration."

Series. Descriptions with "Series" appended to a project number precede and identify multi-volume series.

Compilations. The major entry for a compilation, describing the bound volume as an entirety, is indicated by the project number followed by ".0" (e.g., MN 419.0). The individual texts inscribed in any compilation are designated by sub-numerals (e.g., MN 419.1, MN 419.2, etc.).

Shelf numbers. Following the project numbers are the shelf numbers of the manuscripts in the original repositories.

Reel numbers. Following the shelf numbers are the reel and item numbers for the original filming of the text as well as for any reshoots that may have been deemed necessary. Reel numbers are preceded by "SMP" (for Surakarta Manuscript Project). For example, "SMP 27/3–28/1; R179/52" means that the original film of the described text is on Surakarta Manuscript Project Reel 27, Item 3 and Reel 28, Item 1, and that refilmed pages can be found on Surakarta Manuscript Project Reel 179, Item 52.

Positive copies of the Surakarta Manuscript Project films (225 reels of 35 mm. film and fifty-one reels of 16 mm. film) are available for use at the originating repositories and at the libraries of Cornell University, the University of Michigan, the University of Washington, and the Australian National University. Negative copies are deposited at Cornell University and at the Indonesian National Archives in Jakarta. The originating repositories retain the copyrights to reproductions of their manuscripts.

TITLES

Standardized titles. The primary bibliographical entry for each text is that text's standardized title, provided in bold in the lines immediately following the project collation numbers. Titles were standardized to facilitate indexing, thus to make the materials more accessible to potential users. When a single text is known by two or more standard titles, each of those titles is listed and indexed, the alternative titles preceded by "=" signs.

The determination of titles for these volumes proceeds from, and often corrects, my earlier work in the field. This process of determination was at times complicated. Only occasionally were these manuscripts provided with title captions that were contemporary with the inscription of the codex. More frequently the title of a work would be announced in the initial stanzas or paragraphs of the text. But for many a text (or often fragment of a text) the clues by which I disclosed the writing's name were rather more subtle. I have often determined titles of unidentified texts (and fragments of texts) by means of content analyses as well as by intertextual comparisons. Most of the texts of the Surakarta manuscripts were composed in verse, and comparisons of beginning lines of cantos has proven a very useful method to establish textual identities. I have sometimes assigned titles to unknown works and to undesignated compilations. Assigned titles are enclosed in brackets.

Titles as they appear. Often there follows, in brackets and italics, yet another title: the title as it appears in the original manuscript or upon the captioned board covering the manuscript. This "title as it appears" is included in the entry both to record original orthographic peculiarities and scribal variations and to preserve the record of previous indigenous categorizations of the volumes.

AUTHORS

The authors' names follow the titles in the entries. When possible, I have included the authors' birth and death dates. The writers of many of these texts remain unknown. The manuscripts themselves only rarely provide a straightforward record of the author's name. I have made every effort to identify the authors of these works. These determinations of authorship often required bibliographical detective work. Sometimes I have depended upon conventional attribution and sometimes upon internal evidence in the texts. I have often established authorship from reading internal sandi-asma, a form of acrostic signature that became popular in nineteenth-century Surakarta (see, for example, MN 1 and MN 23) and occasionally attributed it on the basis of style (see, for example, MN 319 and MN 486). My attributions of authorship are indicated by brackets.

PROVENANCE AND DATING OF COMPOSITION, COMPILATION, AND INSCRIPTION

Composed/Compiled. The places and dates of the works' (or renditions') composition (or, in the case of some codices, compilation) follow next in the entries. By composition, I mean the original writing of any work. By compilation, I mean the productive textual work of compiling a collection of texts. In many cases I was unable to establish the works' provenance and dating. The abbreviation "s.l." (sine loco) indicates unknown provenance; "s.a." (sine anno) indicates unknown date. When I was able to establish or attribute provenance and dating, I did so either on the basis of internal textual evidence or by following established conventional designations. My attributions are indicated by the use of brackets.

It is not rare for the date of composition to be written into the initial or concluding stanzas of poetic works. These dates are almost always written in sangkala, or chronograms (often aphoristic phrases, whose words when read backwards, signify—by a logical system of associative conventions—different numerical values). For example, words associated with eyes or arms (which are two) mean "two." Words associated with fire mean "three" since guna, "fire" or "ability," also means "three" in Sanskrit. Words associated with holes or openings mean "nine" because of the nine openings of the (male) body. In the descriptive notes to the texts, I render these signifiers into their numerical values in the Javanese calendrical system and then translate those dates into the Gregorian calendar.

Inscribed. The places and dates of inscription follow next. By inscription I mean the material, chirographic act of the physical writing of the artifact. Inscription refers to the original writing of the text in the case of autograph manuscripts. More often inscription refers to an act of copying. Provenance and dating of inscription have often been established by internal textual evidence. As in the case of composition and compilation, colophons at the beginning and end of the text sometimes record the date of inscription. Many of these dates are written in sangkala, especially in poetic works. I should note, however, that it is sometimes quite problematic to differentiate dates of inscription from dates of composition.

I often attribute provenance and rough dates of inscription on the basis of scribal styles. Javanese scribal styles were remarkably uniform in certain places or institutions for certain determined time periods. For example, the distinctive style that characterized writing produced in the Karaton Surakarta's Kadipatèn in the latter nineteenth century was notably different from the mid-century style that preceded it. Again in the same institution, another distinctive style came in vogue around the turn of the twentieth century. These styles differed, in turn, from the more formal Karaton Surakarta quadratic style (kasepuhan). The delicate cursive style favored by the Mangkunagaran scribes of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries is also distinctive. My attributions of provenance and dating of inscription are indicated by the use of brackets.

Again, the abbreviation "s.l." (sine loco) indicates unknown provenance; "s.a." (sine anno) indicates unknown date.

Scribe. The following line records the name of the scribe, when identified. Very few scribes signed their works, however. As I came to know and recognize the hands of some of the more prolific or idiosyncratic Surakarta scribes, I was occasionally able to determine scribal identity on the basis of hand-writing. Such attributions of scribal identity are indicated by the use of brackets.

MANUSCRIPT COLLATION, ILLUMINATION, ILLUSTRATIONS, SIZE

Following are notations pertaining to manuscript collation, illumination, illustrations, and size. Indicated are: 1) the status of the codex in a series, if applicable; 2) the actual number of pages of the described codex (variations and mistakes of pagination are noted in the narrative notes); 3) for a text internal to a compilation, the page numbers of the described text; 4) the presence of illumination or illustrations, if applicable; and 5) the internal dimensions of the document by page.

ON SUBJECT CLASSIFICATION

Following, in italics, is the (sometimes plural) subject classification of the identified text. The assignation of subject headings was, of course, problematic—pleasurably so. The act of categorization itself involves enormous epistemological assumptions, whether those assumptions are uncritically accepted, or challenged, or bent, or stretched. In assigning subject headings I tried to produce a system that would assist the future location by potential readers of those texts that were most relevant to those readers' fields of interest or investigation, while at the same time maintaining respect for the meanings these texts had enjoyed in the past contexts in which they had been inscribed. In practice this often meant a mischievous straddling of several epistemological worlds. My classifications will, I know, invite controversy.

The manuscript descriptions provided here are collated according to their project numbers. I made every attempt to assign these numbers to proceed serially according to thematic progressions in the subject matters of the manuscripts. My best organizational intentions were, however, too often foiled. The inconsistencies are a result, in part, of the particular field conditions in the Mangkunagaran repository as the site where I began my descriptive endeavors in Surakarta. But in addition to these incidental considerations, it should also be noted that the presence of multiple multi-subject compilations in the collection preclude the possibility of a truly consistent thematic categorization of the collection by codex number. Furthermore, a single manuscript title within any codex may belong to several possible thematic categories. For all these reasons, the reader should always refer to the subject index for more complete guidance in selection of manuscript materials according to thematic categories.

The rough thematic categorization of the manuscripts is as follows:

Serat Paramusita = Serat Cakrawarti
Palimasa Purwa

Author: Ronggawarsita, R. Ng. (1802–1873)
Composed: Surakarta, 1843/4
Inscribed: Surakarta, 1879
ii, 360 pp.; 39.5 x 24.5 cm.
Chronology. Time-reckoning

Prose treatise on time-reckoning systems. See MS pp. 205–07 for the author's introduction to, and genealogy of, this work. In this introduction, Ronggawarsita cites the cosmogonic Serat Dyamasastra (see MN 553.1) as his original source and charts the putative transmission of this text over time. The author signs and dates the present text with the sandiasma: "rong [9] naga [8] awarna [4?/7] sinuta [1]." But several lines later, calling himself "Sang Kawiswara," Ronggawarsita provides another date, this one in ciphers: AJ 1771 (1843/4). According to this introduction, the complete Paramusita was to have been divided into nine sections. Extant here is only the first section, the Serat Cakrawarti, a prose treatise on the time-reckoning systems that were relevant in nineteenth-century Surakarta. Included are discussions of, and charts for, Arabic, Chinese, Indian (Hindu and Bengali), Turkish (Rum), Dutch, Coptic, Persian, Bugis and archaic Javanese calendrical systems. The Javanese calendrical systems treated here are:

1. Palimasa: the calendar of Empu Sangkala, used in the era of the gods (on Java).
2. Prawamasa: the calendar of Sri Maharaja Kano.
3. Purwamasa: the calendar of Prabu Palasara.
4. Widdayanamasa: the calendar of Prabu Jayabaya.

Volume is dated AJ 1809 (1879). The present MS is probably copied from MN 2–3. Volume is provided with a table of contents (MS p. ii). Text should be read as follows: first pp. 205–360 and then pp. 1–204.

Cursive Surakarta script (Mangkunagaran).

Watermark: "C & I Honig."

Inserted in the original manuscript is a letter from a certain Jayawiyata presenting this volume to Pandukiswara Nararya Gondasiwaya (a son of Mangkunagara IV); this letter of presentation is dated 22 November 1889.

Chronology. Time-reckoning

Prose treatise on the time-reckoning systems that were relevant in nineteenth-century Surakarta. Included are discussions of, and charts for, Arabic, Chinese, Indian (Hindu and Bengali), Turkish (Rum), Dutch, Coptic, Persian, Bugis and archaic Javanese calendrical systems. This volume extends only to Java's first calendrical era (Palimasa), which is said to have been established by Empu Sangkala and to have begun in the year 1 with the first human population of the island.

See MS p. 1 for the author's introduction to, and genealogy of, this work. In this introduction, Ronggawarsita acknowledges the cosmogonic Serat Dyamasastra as his original source. He signs and dates the present text with the sandiasma: "rong [9] naga [8] awarna [4?/7] sinuta [1]." (AJ 1789 = AD 1860/1). But several lines later, calling himself "Sang Kawiswara," the author provides another date for the text, this one in ciphers: AJ 1771 (1843/4). The introduction prefaces a text which was to have comprised nine sections; extant here is the first part of section I: Serat Cakrawarti.

History. Java - Pustaka Raja -- 0710–1105±

Ronggawarsita's complete Pustaka Raja series composes a universal history of Java for the Javanese years 1 to 1400, that is, from the first human population of the island by Empu Sangkala up to the fall of the Majapahit empire. The narrative traces Javanese dynastic history from time the Hindu gods reigned as kings on Javanese soil down through the generations of their royal descendants, including the Javanese (!) Pandhawa and Kurawa princes of Mahabharata fame, the heroes and heroines of the Panji tales, the early legendary kings of Central Java, and the rulers of Majapahit. And if one includes Ronggawarsita's Paramayoga (MN 319D.10; KS 279.3) that prefaces it and his Babad Itih, (MN 84–95) that forms its sequel, the Pustaka Raja history extends from the Creation up to the division of the realm of Mataram into the modern kingdoms of Surakarta and Yogyakarta in the sixth decade of the eighteenth century. Compiled (mostly) in prose and supplied with dual chronologies (for solar and lunar years), the Pustaka Raja was produced by the prolific Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn pujongga R. Ng. Ronggawarsita III in the middle years of the nineteenth century. Working from a wide variety of both written and oral sources, Ronggawarsita composed this history to be a compendium of traditional Javanese lore in addition to being a record of the Javanese past. Among Javanese dhalang, the portions of the history that treat the adventures of the Pandhawa and Kurawa princes are widely considered the standard for classical dramatic emplotment.

On Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja, see also Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, Synopsis of Javanese Literature 900–1900 A.D. (The Hague: Martinus Nyhoff, 1967), pp. 170–71; Poerbatjaraka, Kapustakan Djawi (Jakarta: Djambatan, 1952) , pp. 163–64; T.E. Behrend, Katalog Induk Naskah-naskah Nusantara , vol. I, Museum Sonobudoyo (Jakarta: Djambatan, 1990), pp. 370–71; Drewes, "Ranggawarsita, the Pustaka Raja Madya and the Wayang Madya," Oriens Extremis 21 (1974): 199–215; Anthony Day, "Meanings of Change in the Poetry of Nineteenth-Century Java" (Ph.D. Dissertation: Cornell University, 1981), pp. 220–32; and Laurie Sears, Shadows of Empire: Colonial Discourse and Javanese Tales (Durham: Duke University Press, 1996), pp. 94–98.

The Ronggawarsitan Pustaka Raja collection in the Mangkunagaran Library is no doubt the most extensive in the world. The collection (MN 5–18, MN 24–95, MN 119–129, MN 496–500) comprises some 103 volumes (totaling 67,259 pages in MS). And these numbers do not include the extensive Pustaka Raja verse adaptations and the Pustaka Raja play-scripts for wayang performance also housed in this library (MN130-166, MN 96-118).

The present series is inscribed in Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn script (with additions and reparations in a cursive Surakarta style associated with the Mangkunagaran Palace).

The first volume of this series is no longer extant in the Reksa Pustaka. According to R. Tanoyo, who had spent eight years (1935–42) working in the Sono Budoyo-Panti Budoyo collections prior to beginning his work in the Mangkunagaran library in 1943, vol. I of the series was at one time housed in the Sono Budoyo collection (interview September 1980). This volume, which Tanoyo identifies as Pustaka Raja Wéddha, was not, however, described in Behrend's recent catalogue of Sono Budoyo manuscripts of Yogyakarta (Katalog Induk vol. I).

During his years at the Reksa Pustaka (1943–46), Tanoyo prepared a catalogue of MSS that includes précis of the Mangkunagaran Pustaka Raja volumes' contents. That catalogue, Pratélanipun Serat-serat Basa lan Sastra Jawi Seratan Tangan ingkang Sumimpen wonten ing Kantor Reksa Pustaka Mangkunagaran (MN 706), is frequently referenced in the descriptions below.

The romance of Prabu Anglingdarma, legendary ruler of the kingdom of Malawapati. Macapat verse. See Drewes, The Romance of King Angling Darma in Javanese Literature, esp. pp. 170–231.

This MS was copied, evidently as a didactic exercise, by the children of R.T. Wiryakusuma (see MS p. 1): ". . . duk kala anedhak sungging, wit keng karsa Dyan Menggung Wiryakusuma. Kinèn anyerat kang atma, mugi sami dèn maklumi wit carita nagri Jawa. . ." MS was apparently acquired from Ir. J. L. Moens, a Dutch civil servant and aficionado of Javanese letters who lived and worked in Yogyakarta in the 1920s; a pencilled note in fly-leaf reads, "30–11–1920 saking Tuwan Moens."

The script is similar to one which is associated with the court of Pakubuwana X.

A rendering in verse of a portion of the author's Pustaka Raja Madya. This volume treats Ajipamasa's reign in Kadhiri-Mamenang. A comparison of opening lines of cantos in this MS with those of the published edition (Surakarta, 1896) show the two to be almost identical. The published edition, the contents of which are described in some detail in Poewa Soewignja and Wirawangsa, Pratélan Kawontenaning Boekoe-boekoe Basa Djawi, vol. II (Batavia: Ruygrok & Co., 1921), pp. 147–57, comprises a total of 55 cantos, however.

The present MS (canto I, p. 1) contains the author's signature in sandi-asma and a record of the poem's date of composition, AJ 1791 (1862/3), in candrasangkala: "jalma [1] trus [9] kaswarèng [7] bumi [1]." MS ends (canto 53, p. 878) with a record of the date of this copy, Respati, 4 Sapar Dal 1815 (13 November 1885); sangkala: "tata [5] harja [1] ngèsthi [8] siwi [1]." The published edition of this text (Surakarta, 1900) comprises only 18 cantos; see Pratélan II: 219–22. A comparison of opening lines of cantos in the present MS and the published edition show the first 19 cantos of the two redactions to be almost identical; canto 12 of the present MS is absent from the published edition, however. MN 23 (canto 1, p. 1) contains the authors' names in sandi-asma and the date of the poem's composition, AJ 1792 (1863/4), in candrasangkala: "nembah] [2] trus [9] sukaning [7] budi [1]." MS was inscribed by Mas Demang Citrawursita from another prototype text in his possession; copy is dated AJ 1847 (1917); see MS p. 304.

Note: the first two pages of MS table of contents (pp. i–ii) are severely damaged and could not be filmed without further endangering the artifact. Filmed in their place were pages with identical copy from Reksa Pustaka MS. O 8 (a later copy of MN 23); the remaining pages of MS O 8 were not filmed.

Rendering in macapat verse of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Madya (ca. 901–11 solar). Text treats the court and career of Prabu Ajipamasa (Kusumawicitra) in Witaradya-Pengging through the succession to the throne of his son, Prabu Citrasoma. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Rarasing [kang] sekar sarkara mrih." Poem composed by "Tuwan Pris Winter" and R. Ng. Ronggawarsita (see poem, canto I; note especially the double sandi-asma: the first syllable of each line of the poem's opening stanza and the first syllable of each stanza of the poem's opening canto). Poem dated AJ 1792 (1863/4), sangkala: "nembah [2] trus [9] sukaning [7] bumi [1]."

Javanese history for the solar years 969–1008. Prose. Volume treats the histories of a number of classical Javanese realms, including that of Pengging during the reign of Prabu Anglingdriya. In the realm of Galuh, the god Sang Hyang Sindhula descends from heaven to reign as king with the title Prabu Sindhula. The god-king Prabu Sindhula leads a rebellion in Parayangan. Prabu Karungkala, father of the legendary princess Lara Jonggrang, reigns as king of Gopala Parambanan. Declaring himself an independent sovereign, Karungkala revolts against Pengging. Perishing in battle, Karungkala is succeeded by his son-in-law, Prabu Baka (the husband of Lara Jonggrang). Prabu Baka also perishes on the field of battle. Meanwhile in Galuh Prabu Sindhula banishes his son for the crime of cannibalism; that son's name is Déwatacengkar. Déwatacengkar establishes a new kraton in western Medhangkamulan. He attacks and defeats his father's kraton. Prabu Sindhula vanishes (muksa) along with his entire court. Déwatacengkar then attacks and defeats Pengging; Prabu Anglingdriya vanishes (muksa). Déwatacengkar then moves his palace to Medhangkamulan-Tulyan, where he remains until he is destroyed by the trickery of Bramana Saka. Bramana Saka then becomes king with the title of Prabu Widdhayaka; his realm is called Purwacarita (Tanoyo, p. 7, no. 28).

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1058–59 (in the present MS the dates are written as solar 1068–69, however). Prose. (Tanoyo, p. 9, no. 39).

Volume treats the histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese kingdoms, including: Lawu-Pamegatan, Purwacarita, Pagelèn, Japara, Prambanam, Pagebangan, and Pajarakan. The text focuses on the reign of Prabu Ardangkara in the realm of Lawu-Pamagetan. Prabu Ardangkara ascends the throne in 1068 (sic) when his father Sri Madéwa (son of Prabu Suwélacala, king of Purwacarita) retires to the hermitage. The retired king becomes a hermit sage and takes the name Resi Malaras. The MS contains the teachings of Resi Malaras to his son and successor on the duties of kingship (pp. 14–20). The text continues with the tales of Ardangkara's marriages to Retna Prasutpati and Retna Panulad. The concluding pages of the volume treat the adventures of "Jaka Pandhak" (Radèn Kalabumi, the dwarfish son of Sri Panuhun who rules Pagelèn). Jaka Pandhak, banished by his father, is adopted by the hermit Resi Wiku Raddhi.

History. Java - Pustaka Raja -- 1059–1060
Wayang. Stories - Pustaka Raja -- 1059–1060
Didactic literature. Statecraft - Kingship

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1059–60. Prose. Treating the histories of a number of legendary, classical realms, the volume focuses especially on the adventures of Prabu Jayalengkara, king of Purwacarita (Tanoyo, p. 9, no. 40).

This volume opens (pp. 1–270) with the adventures of Jaka Pandhak, including his struggle with Prabu Hérnawa, the king of Sambawapura (who is finally revealed as Jaka Pandhak-Radèn Kalabumi's long-lost brother, Radèn Kalabanyu). After the brothers are reconciled, Jaka Pandhak is installed as king of Malatar with the title, Prabu Hérutala. The text (p. 270 ff.) then takes up the story of the king of Purwacarita, Prabu Jayalengkara. Jayalengkara has left his kingdom in sorrow because of false accusations that he is involved in an incestuous relationship with his sister, Retna Condraswara. Disguised as Prabu Kalasurya, Jayalengkara and his allies, Prabu Hérunawa and Prabu Hérutala, attack Ardangkara's kingdom of Lawu Pamagetan (p. 330 ff.). The forces of Kalasurya-Jayalengkara defeat Ardangkara, who flees. To celebrate the victory Kalasurya calls Sulaksana, Ardangkara's ex-vizier and father-in-law, to tell him a story (p. 356 ff.). Sulaksana tells of Ardangkara's decline into sexual profligacy in the interval between his two marriages; because of the innuendo striking Kalasurya's own questionable sexual behavior, the story-teller is immediately put to death. Kalasurya and his ministers then go off in search of Ardangkara. Meanwhile, the text continues (p. 377 ff.), the tiger-headed king of Giyantipura, Prabu Kala Singha, decides to invade Java. His forces attack and defeat the troops Kalasurya had left behind to guard Lawu Pamagetan. Prabu Kala Singha next attacks and defeats the country of Purwacarita, where nightly the demon-king changes his form to that of Jayalengkara and enjoys a sexual liaison with Jayalengkara's elder sister, Retna Condraswara. Meanwhile, the real Jayalengkara (that is, Kalasurya) musters his forces to attack Purwacarita. At the same time Resi Wiku Raddhi and Sri Manuhun (the adoptive and natural fathers of Kalabumi and Kalabanyu) join forces with Kala Singha. The battle rages on and on. Kalasurya is finally defeated. Kala Singha is then revealed as the god Bathara Guru. He vanishes, leaving the god Naraddha behind to instruct Jayalengkara in the precepts of virtue (p. 615 ff.). Purwacarita prospers under the restored rule of Jayalengkara. In the concluding pages of this volume (p. 650 ff.) Retna Condraswara is changed into a snake by the gods in punishment for her refusal to marry. She vanishes to the great consternation of her younger brother, Prabu Jayalengkara.

Wayang. Stories - Pustaka Raja -- 1060–1067

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1060–67. Prose. Treating the histories of a number of legendary, classical realms, the volume focuses especially on the adventures of Prabu Jayalengkara, king of Purwacarita (Tanoyo, p. 9, no. 41).

Volume opens with tales that concern the disappearance of Retna Condraswara, Jayalengkara's sister who has been transformed into a snake. After many trials, she regains her human form, returns to the country of Purwacarita, and (after numerous adventures and misadventures) is eventually married to Adipati Kalungkung. The volume also tells of Prabu Téjalengkara's accession to the throne of Majapura upon the retirement of his father, Prabu Déwalengkara. The volume also treats the reigns of Prabu Déwasraya of Cengkalséwu and Prabu Darmakusuma of Bojanagara. The volume concludes with the dramatic demise of both Jayalengkara (who remains to the end suspected of an incestuous attachment to Retna Condraswara) and the country of Purwacarita. After a lengthy prophecy and a series of spectacular signs, Jayalengkara vanishes with his spiritual advisor into a brilliant radiance. The earth splits open and swallows the country of Purwacarita. The only survivors are those who happen to be out of the country at the time of the holocaust. Among the survivors are several of Jayalengkara's sons and the elusive Retna Condraswara. The MS dates the holocaust to the solar year 1067.

The Catur Pandaha volumes of the Pustaka Raja series also touch on regional Southeast Asian history. Among other things, this volume relates the move of Darmaraja's (= Prabu Sélaraja's) kraton from Bojonagara to Pengging and the division of the kingdom of Jenggala among the four sons of Resi Gathayu. The text includes teachings on the nature and duties of kingship (as related to the new generation of rulers) as well as tales of wandering princes in search of knowledge (and power). See especially the mystical teachings of Resi Wisakarma (p. 254 ff.) and the teachings of Prabu Ajipamasa to his descendant, Prabu Darmaraja, on the nature and duties of kingship (p. 445 ff.).

Historical romance - Jenggala -- Panji tales

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1087–10. Prose and macapat verse. The text presents histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese kingdoms. The Catur Pandaha volumes of the Pustaka Raja series focus on the history of the "Four Kingdoms" of East Java: Jenggala, Kadhiri, Ngurawan, and Singasari. They therefore belong to the tradition of Panji tales. These volumes have a second focus, however, and that focus is on the legendary classical kingdoms of Central Java, especially the kingdoms of Pajang-Pengging and Bojanagara. In addition to Javanese history, the Catur Pandaha volumes are also concerned with regional Southeast Asian history, touching, for example, upon events in Sumatra, the Moluccas, Champa, and Siam.

For general introductory remarks concerning Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja, see notes to MN 8 Series above.

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1087–95. Prose. The text presents histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese and other Southeast Asian kingdoms, focusing on the history of the legendary "Four Kingdoms" of East Java. With the death of Prabu Téjalengkara of Majapura, the god Sanghyang Naraddha descends from heaven to deliver the command of the god Hyang Girinata that now four are to reign as mighty kings in Java: Prabu Jayèngrana (= Prabu Lembuamiluhur) in Jenggala, Prabu Jayanagara (= Lembuamijaya) in Kadhiri, Prabu Jayasasana (= Prabu Lembuamiséna) in Ngurawan, and Prabu Jayantaka (= Prabu Lembuamisani) in Singasari. Text continues through the births of Radèn Hina Kartapati (= Panji, Prince of Jenggala) and Déwi Candrakirana (Princess of Kadhiri). Also related are the histories of Bojanagara (under Prabu Darmaraja = Prabu Kalana Tunjungséta) and of Pajang-Pengging (under Darmaraja's son, Prabu Sélaraja) (Tanoyo, p. 12, no. 51).

On MS p. 1 are introductory notes claiming that this text was composed by the priest Resi Wiratmana in the solar year 1118, by commission of Prabu Suryawisésa (= Panji), King of Jenggala. Volume opens:

> "Awigenam astu namas siddhi. In this volume, tales that relate the valor and extraordinary prowess of the younger generation of Javanese princes (including Radèn Hina Kartapati = Prince Panji = Kalana Jayèngsekar) are focal. It is these young princes who defend Suralaya, the realm of the gods, from the attack of Prabu Kalamurdaningrat of Pracimanta (MS p. 115 ff.). The clown figures (punakawan) from the wayang gedhog repertoire, Bancak and Doyok, make their appearance in this volume (MS p. 406 ff.). There is a lengthy description of a court dance performance (bedhaya) in the section of the text (p. 418 ff.) that treats the romance of Radèn Jungut and Prabu Kanaka Wulan; this passage is composed in poetic metre (sekar macapat). Literary studies. Transmission

Classical Javanese history at the turn of the twelfth century (solar). Mostly prose, with portions of the text in macapat verse. The text presents histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese and other Southeast Asian kingdoms, focusing on the history of the legendary "Four Kingdoms" of East Java: Jenggala (under Prabu Lembuamiluhur), Kadhiri, Ngurawan, and Singasari (Tanoyo, pp. 13–14, no. 56).

Of special note in this volume are the adventures of R. Hina Kartapati (= Panji). In the opening section of this MS, Panji struggles with and defeats Prabu Kalana Andiwangkara of Mendhanggili. Later in the volume, R. Hina Kartapati assumes the name Jaka Tandreman. This MS includes lengthy passages that describe story-telling sessions. In these passages, stories from the purwa and madya cycles, as well as stories more contemporary to this text, are retold in considerable detail, often in poetry. (Among the story-tellers is the king of Siam). See MS pp. 339 ff. and 579 ff.

Wayang. Stories - Pustaka Raja -- 1104–1106

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1104–06. Mostly prose, with portions of the text in macapat verse. The text presents histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese and other Southeast Asian kingdoms, focusing on the history of the legendary "Four Kingdoms" of East Java: Jenggala (under Prabu Lembuamiluhur), Kadhiri, Ngurawan, and Singasari (Tanoyo, p. 14, no. 57).

Of special note in this volume are the exploits of R. Hina Kartapati (Prince Panji), including his fateful marriage to Déwi Angrèni and Angrèni's murder. The grieving Prince Panji goes into self-enforced exile; assuming the name Kalana Jayèngsari, he engages in martial wanderings. The wandering warrior prince comes to and conquers Bali, where he reigns with the title Prabu Kalana Jayèngsari. When this "Balinese king" returns to Java he comes to the aid of Kadhiri's king, quelling a rebellion among Kadhiri's vassal adipati. Also included in this volume are histories of the Central Javanese kingdoms of Pengging (under Prabu Pandayaningrat), Pudhaksategal (under Prabu Pandayaraja), and Bojanagara (under Prabu Pandayadarma).

Literary studies. Transmission

Classical Javanese history for the solar years 1108–09. Mostly prose, with portions of the text in macapat verse. The text presents histories of a multiplicity of classical Javanese and other Southeast Asian kingdoms, focusing on the history of the legendary "Four Kingdoms" of East Java: Jenggala (under Prabu Lembuamiluhur), Kadhiri, Ngurawan, and Singasari. Of especial note are the adventures of R. Hina Kartapati (= Panji), who assumes the name Prabu Kalana Jayèngsari in this volume. Also treated are histories of the Central Javanese kingdoms of Pengging, Pudhaksategal, Bojanagara, and Sumedhang. Pengging's king Prabu Danaraja (a.k.a. Prabu Kalana Tunjungséta) dies in battle in Kadhiri and is succeeded by his younger brother, Prabu Batulaya, who takes the title Kalana Tunjungséta. Shortly thereafter Batulaya-Tunjungséta dies and is succeeded by his younger brother Prabu Batulata, who again takes the Kalana Tunjungséta title. Pengging thereafter becomes a vassal state of Jenggala. Prabu Pandayadarma of Bojanagara moves his kraton to Sumedhang in Prayangan and is subsequently known as Prabu Bramasudarma (Tanoyo, p. 15, no. 59).

Volume includes a version of the Aji Saka story (as told to the ruler of Pengging), MS p. 151 ff. The volume also contains a number of tales that relate the origins of certain Javanese customs and practices, e.g., the origin of abdi-dalem upacara (MS p. 330 ff.); restrictions surrounding new-born infants (MS p. 590 ff.); the origin of gong siyem (MS p. 617). The volume also includes a lengthy passage on keris-makers' lore (MS p. 670 ff.). The volume also treats issues of literary transmission (MS p. 514 ff.), with a passage that relates the court poets' (Empu Wiratmaka and Empu Wilasaya) collection of materials for their writings in the course of their wanderings through countryside and villages as well as a passage that describes a singing contest. In this volume, Borneo and Siyem are conquered by Javanese princes from the kingdom of Janggala (MS p. 506 ff.).

History. Java - 1230s -- Galuh, Pajajaran

Javanese history, early-mid thirteenth century solar (lunar years 1184–90). Prose. Volume focuses on the adventures of Prabu Banjaransari (a.k.a. Prabu Sundha Anyakrakusuma), who reigned first as king of the West Javanese kingdom of Pajajaran and then later as king of Galuh in Central Java. Volume opens with Banjaransari's solitary journey across Java from Pajajaran en route to Jenggala. When he arrives in the realm of Galuh, western Central Java, he stops at Terusan Cave, where he performs ascetic practice. The invisible spirit kingdom of Galuh and its spirit queen, Déwi Suprabawati, appear before the meditating king. The mortal king then marries Déwi Suprabawati and thereby comes to rule as king of Galuh.

Also presented are histories of Bali, Pengging, and Bojanagara. Bali's ruler, Adipati Kalungkung, attacks Galuh, is defeated, and submits. The kraton of Prabu Madukusuma in Ngamartalaya-Samapura is destroyed by fire; Madukusuma himself perishes by fire on Mt. Andong. His son, Jaka Supanca is rescued and eventually adopted by Resi Prabanggana of Mt. Suwéla. Meanwhile Madukusuma's younger brother (R. Madusubrata of Singasari) becomes ruler of Pajang-Pengging with the rank of Adipati. He dies in battle under attack of yet another of their brothers, that is, R.H. Madusumarma of Ngurawan. Finally Prabu Banjaransari installs R.H. Madusumarma as king of Pajang-Pengging with the title Prabu Kalana Tunjungséta. Prabu Darmasuséna of Bojanagara submits to the overlordship of Galuh (Tanoyo, p. 20, no. 69).

Court, Karaton Surakarta. Lore - Pusaka

Javanese history, mid thirteenth century (lunar years 1191–1203). Prose. Volume features the adventures of Prabu Banjaransari, king of Galuh. The king prepares for the transfer of authority to the next generation: his son Radèn Bangah is installed as Prabu Anom of Galuh; another son Radèn Sangka (by his queen Dèwi Satapi) is made king of Pajajaran with the title Prabu Mundhingsari. This volume also treats Pengging history. Prabu Madusumarma dies in battle against a foreign invasion led by Sri Maharaja Jaka Kalandaru of Trengganu. Pengging's Patih, Harya Panjangsara, reports to Banjaransari, and is made regent of Pengging with the title Adipati Panjangsara; he is under the authority of the Galuh nobleman R.H. Amongsari (Tanoyo, pp. 19–20, no. 70).

This volume contains the tale of the supernatural origins of the pusaka cannons Kyahi Setomo and Nyai Setomi; these cannons now reside in Jakarta and the Karaton Surakarta respectively (MS p. 18 ff.).

Javanese history, mid thirteenth century (lunar years 1204–12). Prose. Volume focuses on the history of Galuh during the reign of Prabu Banjaransari through his retirement to the hermitage and the succession of his son, Harya Bangah. H. Bangah reigns over Galuh with the title Prabu Purbasagala. Also treated are the histories of Pengging and of Mt. Suwéla. Radèn Sutéja, son of Banjaransari's kinsman R.H. Amongsari, is appointed king of Pengging; he succeeds to his father's position of authority. Sutéja is henceforth known as Ratu Mandhapa. Jaka Supanca, the son of the late Prabu Madukusuma of Ngamartalaya, becomes priest-king of Mt. Suwéla with the title Resi Pancaprabanggana (Tanoyo, p. 20, no. 71).

Prabu Purbasagala, the king of Galuh, dies (muksa) and is succeeded by his son R. Mantalarasa (a.k.a. Prabu Déwamantala and Prabu Darmasagala). When Pajajaran is conquered by Galuh, Pajajaran's king, Prabu Mundhingsari, flees to Ujungkolan, the hermitage of Bagawan Usuktunggul. Mundhingsari and Usuktunggal then flee eastward to Mt. Suwéla, where they seek refuge with Resi Pancaprabanggana. All Mundhingsari's brothers muster on Mt. Suwéla for an counter-attack on Galuh. Ratu Mandhapa flees from Galuh; on Mundhingsari's advice he moves on to Pengging (Tanoyo, pp. 20–21, no. 72). Toward the close of the volume (MS p. 326 ff.) is the tale of the rivalry between Radèn Déwanjali, the adoptive son of Resi Pancaprabanggana (Mt. History. Java - 1320s–1350s -- Pajajaran, Majapahit, Pengging Javanese history, mid fourteenth century (lunar years 1281–1315). Prose. Volume features the histories of Pajajaran, Majapahit, and Pengging (Tanoyo, p. 22, no. 76).

Of special note is a narrative that recounts the murder of Prabu Gondakusuma (a.k.a. Sri Pamekas), the king of Pajajaran, by his son, Radèn Banyakwidhé. Radèn Banyakwidhé, often named Siyung-wanara in other texts, entices his father to enter an iron cage that he has fashioned. The prince then has the cage cast into the Krawang River. With this patricide Radèn Banyakwidhé avenges his father's earlier attempt on his own life: just after the prince's birth Prabu Gondakusuma had set the infant prince to drift in the sea in order to avert a prophecy that Pajajaran would fall at the hands of Banyakwidhé (MS p. 41 ff.). Banyakwidhé, henceforth with the title Sri Maha Raja Sakti, then reigns over Pajajaran.

The narrative continues with a history of the eastward flight of Radèn Banyakwidhé's elder brother, Arya Tanduran (Radèn Susuruh). Susuruh later returns westward and attacks his younger brother's kraton. Pajajaran is defeated. Then it is Maharaja Sakti who flees east to shelter with his father-in-law, Prabu Darmastuti, king of Pengging Salahtiga. Eventually Radèn Susuruh also proceeds eastward again and founds the kingdom of Majapahit, over which he reigns with the title Prabu Bratana. Bratana invades and defeats Pengging Salahtiga; Maha Raja Sakti dies in battle. When Darmastuti (a.k.a. Handayaningrat) dies (muksa), he is succeeded by his son, Harya Bramastuti, who reigns with the title Prabu Brawa. Prabu Brawa moves the kraton to Bahrawi; his kingdom, now known as Pengging-Ambarawa, is a vassal state of Majapahit. After Prabu Brawa dies (in battle against a hermit of Mt. Pragota), he is succeeded by his son Prabu Brahmanaraja.

This volume includes the story of Ajar Suwida, the hermit of Mt. Kombang. The hermit priest had earlier been the Pajajaran princess, Retna Suwida, a daughter of Prabu Mundhingsari. Because of her incestuous love for her own brother, the god Naraddha transformed her into a man and placed her/him on Mount Kombang. Ajar Suwida is the one who instructs R. Susuruh to found Majapahit. She/he also reveals to the prince that in a future age she will rule as Kangjeng Ratu Kidul, spirit Queen of the Southern Ocean (see MS p. 150 ff.).

History. Java - 1350s–1380s -- Majapahit, Pengging,

Javanese history, late fourteenth century (lunar years 1316–47). Prose. Volume focuses on the history of Majapahit and features the Damar Wulan story. In this volume Prabu Bratana dies (muksa) and is succeeded by his son, Prabu Anom Loringpasar, who reigns with the title Prabu Brakumara (Brakusuma?). When Brakumara is later murdered by one of his vassals, the throne passes to his son, Harya Hadiwijaya, who reigns as Prabu Brawijaya I. The first Brawijaya is succeeded by his daughter, Dèwi Subasiti; she reigns as queen with the title Ratu Ayu. Prabu Ménak Jingga of Blambangan courts Ratu Ayu. He is defeated in battle and killed by her emissary Radèn Harya Damar Wulan. Ratu Ayu marries Damar Wulan and surrenders her kingdom to him; he rules as king with the title Prabu Brakusuma. Meanwhile Ratu Ayu's younger brother, Hayam Wuruk has fled Majapahit for the court of Prabu Bratandriya of Pengging Bahrawa. In Pengging he takes the name R.H. Partawijaya. Partawijaya then attacks Majapahit, defeating his sister and her spouse (Brakusuma). Partawijaya assumes the throne and rules as Brawijaya II. Upon his death he is succeeded by his son who rules as Brawijaya III.

During this period, reigning successively as kings of Pengging are: Prabu Brahmanaraja, Prabu Bratandriya, Prabu Padmandriya, Prabu Lembusura (an appointee from Surabaya of Brawijaya II), and Prabu Kalana Tunjungséta (the son of Padmandriya). Under Kalana Tunjungséta, the kraton is returned to the old city of Pajang, and Pengging ceases to be a vassal state to Majapahit (Tanoyo, pp. 22–23, no. 77).

History. Java - Pustaka Raja -- 1410s–1420s; 1363–1376 (candra)

History. Java - 1410s–1420s -- Majapahit, Pengging

Javanese history, early fifteenth century (lunar years 1363–76). Prose. Volume focuses on the history of the kingdom of Majapahit (Tanoyo, p. 23–24, no. 78).

The narrative features relations between the kingdom of Majapahit and its vassal, the kingdom Pajang-Pengging in Central Java. While heavily weighting the role of Pajang-Pengging's king, Prabu Handayaningrat VIII, in the expansion of the Majapahit empire (see especially p. 440 ff.), the text also treats the fixation on the unification of Java that drives Majapahit's king, Brawijaya V. The royal houses of Majapahit and Pengging are united through marriage when Handayaningrat VIII marries Brawijaya's daughter Retna Pembayun (MS p. 565 ff.). Also treated in this volume is the marriage of Brawijaya V to a Chinese princess (MS p. 400 ff.). Later, owing to the jealousy of Brawijaya's other queen (the Cham princess), the then pregnant Chinese princess is sent to off to Sumatra where she is given in marriage to Harya Damar, one of her step-sons. Harya Damar is the half-Javanese, half-demon ruler of the newly pacified kingdom of Palembang. There, the cast-off Chinese princess gives birth to Brawijaya's son, Radèn Praba (later known as Radèn Patah, the first Sultan of Demak) (MS p. 607 ff.).

Volume tells of the arrival of the first Islamic missionaries to Majapahit. The missionaries come from Arabia, via Cempa, Cambodia, and Sumatra; they are related to the Cham princess who has become Brawijaya V's queen (see MS p. 331 ff. and 616 ff.). This volume includes the tale of Jaka Tarub and his marriage to the heavenly nymph, Déwi Nawangwulan (MS p. 145 ff.).

The volume includes passages that deal with keris lore and keris making, notably tales of the famous smith, R. Jaka Sura (MS p. 35 ff.) as well as a passage purporting to relate the origins of the srimpi dance (MS p. 590 ff.; see also MS p. 640).

History. Java - 1460s–1540± -- Majapahit, Pengging, Demak, Pajang

Javanese history, late fifteenth through mid sixteenth centuries (lunar years 1420–98). Prose. Volume features the founding of Demak and the fall of Majapahit. Volume opens with the erection of the sacred mosque of Demak; the mosque is constructed by the wali who brought Islam to Java (the construction is dated 1420 candra). Having migrated to Java from Palèmbang, Radèn Patah, the son of Brawijaya and the Chinese princess, is installed by his father as the Adipati of Bintara (Demak). The wali grant him the title Sénapati Jimbun, and with their support, he and his allies attack and defeat Majapahit (MS p. 180). Brawijaya escapes and flees to the west; he dies at Saparhuru to the south of Ardi Séwu. Sénapati Jimbun finds his father's body and buries it in Demak. For forty days Sunan Giri Kadhaton (Sunan Giri II) reigns as (temporary) ruler of Demak. At the end of the forty-day period, the wali install Sénapati Jimbun as the first Sultan of Demak with the title Sultan Syah Alam Akbar. Upon the death of Demak's first sultan, he is succeeded by his son, Pangéran Adipati Sabrang Lér whom the wali install as Sultan Demak II. When Sultan Demak II dies, the wali install his younger brother, R. Trenggana, as Sultan Demak III. With the death of Sultan Demak III, the pusaka (sacred regalia) are all taken by the wali lord Ratu Tunggul (that is, Sunan Giri III) to Giri. Because he wields the pusaka, Ratu Tunggal wields authority over Demak (and hence, over all Java). Adipati Pajang (a.k.a. Jaka Tingkir), Sultan Demak III's son-in-law, is granted authority to rule the outer realms. Sunan Kudus, now recognized as the most senior of the wali, acts as guardian to the royal family of Demak (Tanoyo, pp. 24–25, no. 79).

The final pages of the volume record the history of the conflict between Adipati Pajang and Harya Jipang (a son of Sultan Demak II) and the death of Harya Jipang at the hands of Pajang's young courtier, Loring Pasar (Panembahan Sénapati).

Marginal note on p. 180: with the fall of Majapahit (dated 1442 lunar), Pustaka Raja Puwara ends and Babad Itih begins.

History. Java - 1540s–1610s± -- Pajang, Mataram

Javanese history, late 16th c. through ca. 1615. Prose. History of Pajang and Mataram. After having wielded supreme authority over Java for twenty-one years, Ratu Tunggul of Giri surrenders his authority to Adipati Pajang, who henceforth rules as Sultan of Java from his palace in Pajang, Central Java; the new sultan's title is Sultan Hadiwijaya. Upon the death of Sultan Hadiwijaya, Sunan Giri installs as his successor, Hadiwijaya's son-in-law, Pangéran Adipati Madépandhan. The new sultan is called Sultan ing Ngawantipura; he rules Pajang until its defeat by Mataram, Pajang's old vassal. The forces of Mataram are led by Sultan Pajang's foster son, Sénapati Ngalaga; allied with Mataram is Pangéran Benawa, Sultan Hadiwijaya's son. With the defeat of Sultan Ngawantipura, Sénapati establishes Benawa on the throne of Pajang, where he rules with the title Susuhunan Prabuwijaya. Sénapati reigns over an independent Mataram; his title is Panembahan Sénapati. Having taken with him all the pusaka of Pajang, Sénapati rules as high king until his death ca. 1603. Sénapati's son then succeeds to the throne, reigning as Susuhunan Hadi Prabu Anyakrawati of Mataram (a.k.a. Panembahan Séda Krapyak). Upon this king's death (ca. 1613), the throne goes, very temporarily, to a younger son, P.H. Martapura; Martapura reigns for only two hours. Then the late king's elder son, Pangéran Adipati Anom Mataram is installed king with the title Sinuhun Kangjeng Sultan Agung Prabu Anyakrakusuma (Tanoyo, pp. 25–26, no. 80).

This volume includes an account of the romance of Ratu Kidul (Queen of the South Sea) and the young Sultan Agung just prior to his accession to the throne (MS p. 669 ff.). Volume continues through Sultan Agung's early campaigns to subdue the eastern pasisir.

In addition to his Dutch patrons, also allied with Pakubuwana I are Pangéran Cakraningrat of Sampang-Madura and Pangéran Wijil of Kadilangu. Pakubuwana and his forces invade and take the Kartasura palace. Amangkurat III flees to East Java, where he is captured by the Dutch and sent into exile. Pakubuwana I rules Java from his palace in Kartasura. Upon the death of Pakubuwana I in 1719, his son succeeds him as king. The new king reigns in Kartasura with the title Amangkurat IV (a.k.a. Amangkurat Jawa).

The second half of the volume (MS p. 344 ff.) composes an account of events that formed a prelude to the Giyanti War, a war that was to result in the division of Java in 1755. The exploits and talents of Amangkurat Mas's eldest son and Pakubuwana II's elder step-brother, Pangéran Mangkunagara, are highlighted in this account. Related is a history of the intrigues against Prince Mangkunagara, which, masterminded by Patih Danureja, eventuated in the exiles of both the prince and his accuser. The exiled prince left three sons behind in Kartasura: R.M. Sayid (the future Mangkunagara I), R.M. Sabar, and R.M. Ambya. Also recounted in this volume is a history of the birth and the youth of Pakubuwana II's younger step-brother, R.M. Sujana (the future Pangéran Amangkubumi, later Sultan Hamengkubuwana I). The sons of the of the exiled Prince Mangkunagara are given new names and positions at court. The eldest of these sons (the future Mangkunagara I) is called R. Suryakusuma. Featured in this volume is an account of the Chinese uprisings in Batavia and in Central Java (see for example, MS p. 16 ff., p. 64 ff., p. 565 ff., p. 630 ff.) An interesting passage (MS p. 408 ff.) discusses Pakubuwana II's involvement in theatrical performance (wayang wong Ménak). There are numerous passages that concern prophecies, signs, and rumors of momentous change. Of special interest are: a prophecy concerning the move of the divine light (pulung) of royal authority to the Dutch (MS p. 453), the young Yasadipura I's interpretation of a dream presaging the move of the kraton to Surakarta (MS p. 603), and the prophecy revealed by Pakubuwana II's dying mother (Kangjeng Ratu Ageng) concerning the future greatness of her step-son, Prince Mangkubumi (MS p. 613). Also treated is the birth of Lara Beruk (a commoner who was later to become the beloved queen of Pakubuwana III and the mother of Pakubuwana IV) (MS p. 544 ff.). There are notes on the young Yasadipura I and his father (see MS p. 536 ff.).

Javanese history, 1742–46. Prose. Kartasura and Surakarta histories: Pakubuwana II. Volume treats the fall of the Karaton Kartasura to the Chinese rebels and the flight of Pakubuwana II to Panaraga, his return to Kartasura, and the subsequent move of the kraton to Surakarta (Tanoyo, pp. 28–29, no. 85).

The Chinese install R.M. Garendi, the grandson of the exiled Amangkurat III (Mas), as king of Kartasura; the new king's title is Susuhunan Prabu Kuning. Pakubuwana II flees to Panaraga, where he musters his forces (and enlists the help of the Dutch) to retake Kartasura. Once the kraton is regained, the king decides to move his kraton slightly eastward to Surakarta; he negotiates a new treaty with the Dutch (1744).

Of special note in this volume are the estimations of the king's senior advisors (Padmanagara, Pangéran Wijil Kadilangu, and the Dutch Komissaris of Semarang) concerning the brilliant future ahead for the king's younger brother, P.H. Mangkubumi (the future Hamengkubuwana I, founder of Yogyakarta).

For the account of the move of the palace from Kartasura to Surakarta in 1745, see MS pp. 177, 211, and 948 ff..

This volume includes lengthy passages that concern the project of writing history in Java (MS pp. 452–545 and 612 ff.). Pakubuwana II commissions Pangéran Wijil Kadilangu to compose a history of Mataram. In the course of their interview, sources for historical writing and Javanese literary history are discussed (MS p. 452 ff.). The young Yasadipura I (Ng. Sastrahawikrama) is commissioned to translate Arjuna Wiwaha from the Kawi. He is under the tutelage of Pangéran Wijil (MS p. 496 ff.). A discussion among the literati on court service and on recent Javanese history takes place in the home of Padmanagara, Yasadipura I's father (MS p. 528 ff.)

Javanese history, ca. 1746–48. Prose. Surakarta history during the reign of Pakubuwana II (Tanoyo, p. 29, no. 86).

Composing an account of the early years of the Giyanti War, this volume features the exploits and excellence of the king's younger brother, Pangéran Harya Mangkubumi. This prince, the future Hamengkubuwana I, proves himself a soldier and a statesman of note. Signs and portents point towards the coming splitting of Mataram into two kingdoms.

Pangéran Mangkubumi, encamped in the village of Béji, is installed as I.S.K. Sultan Hamengkubuwana [I] by Sèh Ibrahim, the Turkish envoy in the employ of the Dutch. The new Sultan then moves to Mataram, where he builds the kraton of Yogyakarta. Pakubuwana III and Hamengkubuwana meet in the village of Giyanti and sign the treaty that divides the realm (1755). Their agreement is witnessed by the Governor General. Two years later Prince Mangkunagara surrenders to Surakarta, and is made a subordinate ruler (Adipati) with a palace within the city of Surakarta.

Wayang. Lore
Wayang. History

Concise prose epitomes of twenty-two wayang lakon drawn from Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Madya (solar years 785–867). Two sets of folios bound together. Volume opens with an introduction to Pakem Pustaka Raja (Purwa-Madya-Antara-Wasana). This introduction includes a discussion of the creation of wayang madya by Mangkunagara IV as well as a listing of kings and their kingdoms for each of the cycles. Compare with MN 96, pp. 66–79.

With the exception of the first lakon, each of the madya lakon is inscribed twice; the second of each pair of inscriptions is the older. Lakon no. 7a (see below) is from the Gedhog cycle and was bound into this volume by mistake. The lakon are as follows:

Poetic rendition by Ronggawarsita's son, R.M. Panji Yasakusuma, of his father's Pustaka Raja Purwa (solar years 733–50). Macapat verse, in 57 cantos. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula : "Purwaning kang duk nitra kintèki, wiandara sekar maduretna, pan ing nguni panulaté." Taking place in the aftermath of the Pandhawa's victory in the Bratayuda war, the narrative tells of Prabu Yudhisthira's reign as king of Ngastina. When Yudhisthira retires from the throne, he is succeeded by his grand-nephew, Sang Parikesit (the son of Abimanyu and grandson of Arjuna). Parikesit reigns with the title of Prabu Dipayana. Following Parikesit's succession, the five Pandhawa enter into enlightened death, or release (muksa) (Tanoyo, p. 47, no. 126a). Compare text with MN 131.

Authorship established by reading an acrostic signature, or sandiasma, in the poem's second verse.

Drewes suggest 1856 as the date of the poem's composition (Drewes, "Ranggawarsita, the Pustaka Raja Madya and the Wayang Madya," Oriens Extremus 21 [1974], p. 213). See, however, MN 130B which is dated February 1857.

This copy is dated 2 Dulka'idah Jimakir 1818; sangkala, "pangèsthining [8] kalbu [1] saliranira [8] anyipta [1]" (1 July 1889). In the poem's opening verse is a curious sandiasma for the (primary) scribe of the MS: "jadirsungun mawi panti. . ." which is meant to be read backwards: "Mangunsudirja." However, careful examination of the script and paper shows signs of erasure. The text originally read: "Yawirsungun mawi" or, read backwards: "Mangunsuwirya." Compare this hand (p. 1 and 171–367) with other Mangunsuwiryan MSS (i.e., MN 19, 22, 122, 124).

Cursive Surakarta script. This volume is written in at least two hands. MS initial page, on which the copy date is found, and pp. 171–367 are in the hand of Mangunsuwirya.

A rendering in macapat verse of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Purwa (solar years 731–41); sequel to Bratayuda. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Amurwani langening memanis, mèt turuting Srat Pustaka Raja." The narrative, treating the history of Ngastina following the Bratayuda War, tells of Prabu Yudhisthira's reign as king through his retirement and the succession of his grand-nephew, Sang Parikesit (the son of Abimanyu and grandson of Arjuna). Parikesit reigns with the title of Prabu Dipayana. Following the succession, the five Pandhawa enter into enlightened death, or release (muksa). Compare with MN 130.

Focusing on the adventures of Prabu Jayalengkara of Purwacarita and his son Radèn Subrata (Rest Gathayu), the series writes histories relating to the kingdoms of Purwacarita, Jenggala, Pajang-Pengging, and Majapura. The poem constructs a complex and involved history of classical Java's legendary kingdoms.

In this volume Radèn Éndrasasana, a relative of Prabu Jayalengkara, leaves Purwacarita to become a wandering ascetic with the name Dhanghyang Bujaka. His son, Dhanghyang Nilagni, becomes the brahmana of Pajang-Pengging. Meanwhile, Prabu Jayalengkara steals away from his palace and joins with the spirit king, Gandarwa Raja Astawa. Together they undergo numerous trials. They meet Éndhang Masoyi and are then separated from her. Finally they come to Sidayu, where they meet with Resi Adilaku (Tanoyo, p. 48, no. 127).

This volume continues the adventures of Prabu Jayalengkara. Wandering as an ascetic with Gandarwa Raja Astawa, Prabu Jayalengkara meets repeatedly with traces of Éndhang Masoyi and is repeatedly frustrated. Finally he is left by Gandarwa Raja Astawa, and is carried by the wind back to Purwacarita. Jayalengkara's elder sister, Déwi Candraswara vanishes; she makes her way to Bantarangin and Japara before returning home to Purwacarita. Meanwhile, in Pajang-Pengging, Prabu Handayaningrat, allied with Gandarwa Raja Srenggini, extends his authority westward to Madhendha, Palémbang. At volume's end the seven foreign kings (of Sokadana, Siak, Bandhung, Sulébar, Malaka, Benggala, and Sundha) have been borne by a wind to the village of Krakal in Bojanagara (under Pajang-Pengging) (Tanoyo, p. 49, no. 128).

Volume opens with the seven foreign kings who landed in Krakal. These kings, along with Kyai Leksana of Krakal, come to Pajang-Pengging to meet with Prabu Handayaningrat. Meanwhile, Dhanghyang Bujaka, Radèn Subrata, and Radèn Murdaningkung meet with Kyai Subana of Ngandul. Dhanghyang Bujaka then prophesies that R. Subrata will become a courtier to Prabu Téjalengkara of Majapura and act as Téjalengkara's champion against Adipati Suranggana of Banakeling. Gandarwa Raja Karwaka then advises Subrata to meditate and perform ascetic practice in preparation for the coming battle (Tanoyo, p. 49, no. 128).

Volume treats the adventures of Purwacarita's king, Maha Prabu Jayalengkara, during the period he is known as Sri Kalasurya. Jayalengkara celebrates the weddings of his four sons. The wedding ceremony takes place in Majapura and is directed by Prabu Téjalengkara. Radèn Subrata is married to the daughter of Prabu Déwasrama of Mendhangkoripan. Jayalengkara's other three sons (R. Parijaka, R. Jakasuwida, and R. Jakawida) are married to daughters of the king of Sokadana. Subrata's father-in-law then retires, leaving the throne of Mendhangkoripan to his son-in-law, who is henceforth called Resi Gathayu. Resi Gathayu has five children: Ni Rara Suci, R. Déwakusuma, R. Lembu Peteng, R. Lembu Pangarang, and Retna Pregiwongsa. Jayalengkara (now known as Prabu Kandiawan) enters into enlightened death, or release (muksa) at Panataran (Purwacarita); the wahyu (divine light of kingship) moves to his grandson, R. Déwakusuma (the future Prabu Lembu Amiluhur). It is prophesied that Déwakusuma will reign in Jenggala.

The volume relates as well other threads of Javanese history. Jaka Pramana, the son of Pagelèn's king Sri Panuhun, founds a kingdom in Cengkalséwu and takes the name Prabu Déwasraya. He later becomes the patih of Purwacarita, and is then called Harya Minangsraya. Déwi Candraswara, Jayalengkara's elder sister, is married to Adipati Kalungkung in Mendhankungan. Raja Gupala of Baka-Prambanam attacks Pengging and is killed in battle by the young prince of Pengging, R. Bandung Bandawasa. Pengging's king, Prabu Citranata retires and is succeeded by his son-in-law R. Darmamaya (Prince of Salembi). Prabu Dipanata of Salembi retires and is succeeded by his younger son, R. Putraséna (Tanoyo, pp. 52–53, no. 135).

In this volume, Prabu Téjalengkara of Majapura retires from the throne and is succeeded by his son, who is also called Prabu Téjalengkara. Resi Gathayu becomes the Resi of Banakeling. The narrative features the adventures of his five children. His eldest child, a daughter named Déwi Kilisuci, becomes an ascetic priestess in Pucangan (Sélamanglèng). His second child, R. Déwakusuma, enters a contest in Majapura involving a disease-producing pennant, called Tunggul Wulung. Winning the contest, he is married to Majapura's princess, Déwi Téjaswara. Déwakusuma then becomes king of Jenggala and is henceforth called Prabu Lembu Amiluhur. Each of Déwakusuma's three younger brothers becomes a king: Prabu Lembu Amijaya of Kedhiri, Prabu Lembu Mangarang of Ngurawan, and Prabu Lembu Mardadu of Singasari. Lembu Amiluhur and Déwi Téjaswara have a son in whom the god Wisnu is reborn. That son is the famous prince of Jenggala, R. Panji Kasatriyan (Panji Hina Kertapati). The volume also treats the studies of R. Sélaraja of Bojanagara, Pajang-Pengging under the ascetic masters Dhanghyang Anala, Wasi Bayurata, and Empu Madura. Also included are tales of R. Subrata (the young Resi Gathayu) (Tanoyo, pp. 53–54, no. 136).

A rendering in macapat verse of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Madya (ca. surya 1068) by his son, R. Ng. Sontadikara. The text focuses on the adventures of R. Subrata, the son of Prabu Jayalengkara, king of Purwacarita. Having gone into the service of Prabu Téjalengkara, king of Majapura, Subrata invades Banakeling and defeats the armies of its ruler, Adipati Lembu Suranggana. Upon his return to Majapura, Subrata is rewarded for his service. Prabu Téjalengkara installs him as ruler over Banakeling, granting him the status of priest-king and the title of Resi Gathayu (Tanoyo, p. 55, no. 139).

This poem was commissioned by Mangkunagara IV (see canto I, stanza 3) and therefore predates Sontadikara's Jayalengkara Pamriyan, a work that the author composed in 1881/82 by commission of Prangwadana V, Mangkunagara IV's son and successor. The later work (MN 132 Series) treats, in a much more involved manner, the same time period as does the present MS.

Attribution of authorship established by a sandiasma embedded in the opening stanzas of the poem; the sandiasma reads: "Radèn Ngabéhi Sontadikara, Sutanira Sang Ronggawarsita." The poem's initial stanza:

> *Ra*rimbaganing tyas manulad

A rendering in macapat verse of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Madya (solar years 1070–82) by his son, R. Ng. Sontadikara. The text focuses on the adventures of Pajang-Pengging's legendary king, Maha Prabu Darmaraja (a.k.a. Maha Prabu Kalana Tunjungséta), who ruled over the western realms from his kraton in Bojanagara. The poem also treats the history of the eastern realms, whose preeminent rulers at that time reigned in Majapura. They were Maha Prabu Téjalengkara and his son and successor, Prabu Téjangkara. Also treated are the adventures of Resi Gathayu, the Priest-King of Jenggala. Resi Gathayu's son, Radèn Déwakusuma (the future Prabu Lembu Amiluhur) enters the bride contest (sayembara) of Majapura and wins the hand in marriage of Téjalengkara's daughter, Déwi Téjaswara (the future mother R. This volume features the story of Déwi Candrakirana, the Princess of Kedhiri and wife of Jenggala's Prince Panji Kasatriyan (that is, R. Panji Hina Kertapati). As the narrative opens, the princess is living in the village of Gumulung, where she has changed her name to Retna Paniba. When she is found by Panji Kasatriyan, they go together to the forest. The princess is then kidnapped by Brahmana Kandha, priest of Mt. Jembangan and brought to his encampment at Wringin Bang, Kedhiri. There the priest presents Retna Paniba (Déwi Candrakirana) to his son Prabu Klana Rengganisura (King of Pudhaksategal) that she may become his wife (Tanoyo, pp. 55–56, no. 141).

Rendering in macapat verse of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Madya (early 12th c. solar). Panji tales. History of the Four Kingdoms: Jenggala, Kedhiri, Ngurawan, and Singasari. Poem was commissioned by Mangkunagara IV and is dated 5 Dulkijah Jé 1806 (11 December 1877).

In this volume Déwi Candrakirana has already given birth to a son, Radèn Kudalaléyan (a.k.a. Mahésa Tandreman, founder of the kingdom of Pajajaran). Princess Candrakirana—now in male form as Prabu Madubrata—rules over Bali. She regains her original form upon Panji Kasatriyan's invasion of Bali. R. Brajanata of Jenggala (Panji's eldest sibling) marries Retna Prabawati. R. Gunungsari of Kedhiri (Candrakirana's brother) marries Retna Ragil Kuning of Jenggala (Panji's sister). Panji Kasatriyan defeats the King of Sumbawa; that king's daughter is given in marriage to Prince R. Gunungsari of Kedhiri. Jaka Balara from the hermitage of Ajar Suciptarasa of Tirtamaya on Mt. Aswata, is adopted by the widow Randha Capana of Semawung; known as Jaka Semawung, this youth meets up with Panji Kasatriyan. Panji Kasatriyan comes to Ngurawan where he marries his younger brother, R. Panji Nèm, to the Princess Déwi Kumudaningrat (Tanoyo, p. 56, no. 142).

In this volume the hermit Resi Puspagatiraga restores Prabu Kalasurya, the demon king of Ambawaretna, to her original form as Déwi Candrakirana. Puspagatiraga then regains his own original form, that is, as Candrakirana's husband, R. Panji Kasatriyan. Panji Kasatriyan then meets another of his wives, Déwi Andayaraga (the daughter of Prabu Sélaraja of Pengging) and their children Kedana-Kedini. Panji divorces yet another of his wives, Retna Cindaga, sending her back to Ngurawan. Panji then meets three of his children: R. Jaka Lambang [= R. Kuda Ambarangin] (born of Déwi Retnadi of Balambangan); R. Bangawan (born of Déwi Nawangsasi of Singasari); and R. Lautan (born of Déwi Andayaprana of Bali) (Tanoyo, p. 57, no. 144).

In this volume, the princes of Jenggala come to the aid of Kandabumi's king, joining battle against the enemy kingdom of Tunggul Maruti. The king of Tunggul Maruti perishes in battle.

R. Udansari regains her original form as Déwi Retnadi (Panji Kasatriyan's wife from Balambangan). She and her son, R. Kuda Rerangin, join Panji Kasatriyan.

In the realm of Ngurawan, Panji's estranged wife, Retna Cindhaga, does ascetic practice and is transformed into a demon; she attacks Panji Kasatriyan when he comes to Ngurawan.

The prince of Kedhiri, R. Gunungsari, falls in love with Déwi Rondhonsari (daughter of the priest, Begawan Poncawisésa of Limaya). Because of this infatuation, Gunungsari's wife, Déwi Ragil Kuning, leaves her husband and returns to her natal home, Jenggala. Meanwhile, Brahmana Kandha's son, Sri Kalana Prabu Jaka (King of Jajarséwu), also seeks Rondhonsari's hand. He sends emissaries to Limaya. These emissaries are defeated in battle, and Déwi Rondhonsari is won by Panji Kasatriyan. Later, Sri Kalana Prabu Jaka dies in battle in Kedhiri.

Retna Cindhaga pretends to be possessed by the spirit of Déwi Candrakirana. Because of this, Panji Kasatriyan casts out Candrakirana, sending her back to Kedhiri. Panji is then banished by Lembu Amiluhur. He too goes to Kedhiri, where he takes on the identity of an old peasant and the name, Cèkèl Jayasemadi.

Sang Hyang Surya transforms Déwi Candrakirana and Déwi Ragil Kuning into golden snails and presents them to the widow Randha Dhadhapan. When they regain human form Randha Dhadhapan calls them Bok Limaran and Bok Nilakatangi. Panji Kasatriyan comes to Dhadhapan, where he meets the two girls.

Meanwhile, Ki Jarudèh changes into Déwi Kenakawulan; "she" spies on Prabu Brakumara, King of Manggada (Tanoyo, p. 58, no. 145).

In this volume R. Gunungsari, while grieving in the forest over the loss of his wife Ragil Kuning, meets Déwi Kenakawulan. After they part, he makes for Dhadhapan, where he meets Ragil Kuning, Panji Kasatriyan, and Candrakirana. After Ki Jarudèh returns from his spying mission in Manggada, Prabu Brakumara invades Dhadhapan and is defeated..Brakumara's sister (Kenakawulan) is taken as a captive woman.

Panji Kasatriyan then returns to Jenggala. Before long he gives aid in battle to Prabu Surènggana of Camara against the forces of Prabu Banaputra of Sélamirah. R. Jaka (Panji Kasatriyan's son by Déwi Surèngrana) wins a spirited competition for the hand of Déwi Rantansari.

On Mt. Jembangan, Prabu Kalana Antisura of Simbarmanyura asks his father Brahmana Kandha to get him a wife. The brahmana makes for Java; coming to Ngurawan, he kidnaps R. Panji Anom and Déwi Mindaka. Déwi Kumudaningrat is sent off to Jenggala.

Sang Panji Kasatriyan sends two of his sons, R. Jaka Sumawung (by Déwi Cindhaga) and R. Laléyan (by Déwi Candrakirana), to find their uncle, Panji Anom. Whichever finds him will be rewarded with the keris, Kyai Kalamisani. The two princes depart on the quest. When they come to a forest, they are attacked by bandits. Jaka Semawung, the elder brother, is captured. R. Laleyan, coming to his brother's rescue, frees Jaka Semawung. But once his bonds are loosed, Jaka Semawung stabs his younger brother to death and throws his body in a river. Prabu Minarodra, the god of fish, brings the dead Laléyan back to life; he then marries the young prince to his daughter, Déwi Minawati. Laléyan is granted power over the yellow and green jins. Laléyan then makes for Mt. Jembangan, where he rescues his uncle, Panji Anom, and aunt, Déwi Mindaka. Déwi Bikangmardéya, Klana Antisura's younger sister, is taken captive.

Then Jaka Semawung arrives on Mt. Jembangan, where he is wounded by R. Kalana Jayapuspita (Antisura's younger brother). Jaka Semawung is the first to return to Jenggala. He comes before his father, Panji Kasatriyan. Before long Laléyan arrives at audience with his rescued aunt and uncle. The servants of the two brothers argue over which of their masters deserves the reward (Tanoyo, pp. 58-60, no. 146).

In this volume Prabu Lembu Amiluhur of Jenggala comes forth to settle the dispute between his grandsons, R. Jaka Semawung and R. Laléyan; the princes are arguing over which of them deserves credit for Panji Anom's rescue. But the audience is interrupted by the attack of Kalana Prabu Jaka and Prabu Brahmakestu (the sons of Brahmana Kandha and Brahmana Sakti respectively). Prabu Brahmakestu falls to R. Panji Anom. R. Panji Kasatriyan orders his sons R. Jaka Semawung and R. Laléyan to combat; whichever of them defeats Sri Kalana Prabu Jaka will be rewarded with the keris Kyai Kalamisani. In the ensuing battle, R. Jaka Semawung is killed by Sri Kalana Prabu Jaka. R. Laléyan avenges his brother's death, killing Kalana Prabu Jaka.

Then Brahmana Kandha together with Prabu Brakumara of Makasar attack Kedhiri. They are joined by Prabu Mandrasaraba of Siyem and Prabu Kalana Sakti Anjayèngsantanu before all fall back to Mt. Jembangan. The troops of Jenggala (aside from Panji Kasatriyan who remains in Kedhiri) return home.

Brahmana Kandha then goes to Limaya and kidnaps Déwi Rondhonsari.

Panji Kasatriyan is then heartbroken when he arrives in Limaya and finds her gone. He makes for Mt. Jembangan, where he kills Brahmana Kandha.

Meanwhile, Déwi Cindaga, already distraught that Panji Kasatriyan had sent her back to Ngurawan, is now doubly aggrieved with the death of her son, Jaka Semawung. She does ascetic practice in Sétra Gandamayi, realm of the demonic goddess Bathari Durga. Chided by Durga, Cindhaga departs and meets Panji Kasatriyan as he makes his way from Mt. Jembangan. She attacks him; in the course of their battle she is cast into a ravine where she dies (vanishing body and soul as she regains her original form as the heavenly nymph Déwi Gagarmayang). Panji Kasatriyan continues on his way.

Along the way, Panji Kasatriyan meets his father-in-law, Prabu Lembu Amijaya, along with all Panji's surviving wives. Together they return to Jenggala.

Upon the arrival of this company in Jenggala, Prabu Lembuamiluhur installs Panji Kasatriyan as king; he is granted the title Prabu Panji Suryawisésa. At the same time R. Gunungsari is installed king of Kedhiri; he is granted the title Prabu Suryaamijaya. The two elder kings (Begawan Lembu Amiluhur and Begawan Lembu Amijaya) retire to the hermitage. There the retired kings are tormented by the demon armies of Prabu Badrakala. Panji Suryawisésa and Prabu Suryaamijaya follow their fathers to the hermitage (Tanoyo, pp. 60-61, no. 147).

In this volume Prabu Panji Suryawisésa of Jenggala comes to the hermitage of Paréwarna to visit his father, Bagawan Lembu Amiluhur, and his uncle, Bagawan Lembu Amijaya. There he fights with the demon armies of Prabu Rudrakala. Panji returns to Jenggala together with the two Begawan and Suryaamijaya, the new king of Kedhiri. Upon their arrival at the kraton, they celebrate the wedding of Panji's son R. Kuda Laléyan to Déwi Minawati, the daughter of Prabu Minarodra (the god of fish).

Bagawan Lembu Amiluhur, Begawan Lembu Amijaya, and Déwi Kilisuci enter into enlightened deaths (muksa). Also entering into muksa are Prabu Lembu Mangarang of Ngurawan and Prabu Lembu Mardadu of Singasari. R. Sinjanglaga succeeds to the throne of Ngurawan; R. Banyakwulan succeeds to the throne of Singasari.

Panji Suryawisésa defeats Prabu Rudrakala in battle at the base of the earth. He defeats other demon kings as well.

When R. Brajanata (Jenggala's Patih) dies, he is succeeded by R. Panji Anom (a.k.a. R. Panji Sinom Pradapa and Patih Padmanagara). Prabu Sinjanglaga of Ngurawan weds Retna Nawangsih of Singasari. Patih Padmanagara attacks and defeats the kingdom of Parisman; Parisman's princess (Déwi Téjawati) is wed to R. Kuda Laléyan.

Prabu Panji Suryawisésa comes to the aid of the gods. He defeats the demon king Prabu Baradana who had been threatening Suralaya. The volume ends with the opening of the Peksi Danaraja tale (Tanoyo, pp. 61-62, no. 148).

In this volume, the gods call upon the bird Peksi Danaraja to aid them in their struggle against the demon kings of Nilakantha, Prabu Brawanjala and Prabu Birawaksa. The bird, together with his wife, turn into a weapons that are presented to two of Panji Suryawisésa's sons, R. Kuda Rerangin and R. Kuda Ambarangin. The two princes, as champions of the gods, defeat the demon kings. The Javanese princes first seduce the demon kings' wives (Déwi Puspandari and Déwi Srengganawati); they thereafter kill the demon kings. But when the princes then take the forms of the demon kings whom they have killed, their kingdom is invaded by Jenggala.

Also included in this volume are accounts of story-telling sessions: Nyai Sadu recites Panji romances to Déwi Puspandari and Déwi Srengganawati. The tales include the adventures of Sekartaji as the king of Bali, the marriage of Panji's eldest brother R. Nilaprabangsa to Retna Prabawati, the struggle between Panji and Sang Datusekti of Sambawa, and R. Panji Anom's marriage to Déwi Kumudaningrat of Ngurawan (Tanoyo, pp. 62-63, no. 149).

Opening in the middle of the tragic Agrèni tale, the story continues through Angrèni's death and Panji's subsequent conquests of Bali and of the realms of East and Central Java. Nyai Sadu's recitation continues with the marriage of Panji Kasatriyan (Kalana Jayèngsekar) and Déwi Candrakirana. The recitation continues with the conflict between a false Panji Kasatriyan (actually Bambang Sutirta, a son of Brahmana Kandha) and the true Panji Kasatriyan. The tales of Nyai Sadu to Déwi Puspandari and Déwi Srengganawati are continued in this volume. The false Panji Kasatriyan and his father Brahmana Kandha are killed. The true Panji Kasatriyan is installed king of Jenggala; his title is Prabu Panji Suryawisésa.

Returning to the frame narrative, Déwi Puspandari and Déwi Srengganawati are married to Panji's sons R. Kuda Rerangin and R. Kuda Ambarangin.

The narrative then continues with more story-telling sessions. Now it is the sages Empu Wiratma and Dhanghyang Wiratmaka who recite; their audience is Panji Suryawisésa. The recitation includes accounts of incarnations of the gods Sri, Wisnu, and Basuki. Also narrated are the scandalous tale of Prabu Dipanata, the king of Salembi who married his own daughter and then committed suicide, and the story of R. Darmamaya, the prince of Pengging who defeated the demon king of Prambanan, Ditya Raja Gopala (Tanoyo, pp. 64-65, no. 152).

Volume continues with the tales that Empu Wiratma recites to Prabu Panji Suryawisésa of Jenggala. Déwi Putrawati, the daughter of Prabu Dipanata of Salembi, gives birth to the demon Drembamaha (issue of the incest with her father). When this demon comes of age, he becomes the king of Gopala (Baka) who marries Lara Jonggrang of Prambanam; Drembamaha is then killed by R. Bandhung Bandawasa (the son of Prabu Darmaraja of Pengging). Empu Wiratma also tells of the young R. Lembu Amiluhur's marriage to foreign princesses in Keling (India) and in Patani. The story continues with the births of Lembu Amiluhur's sons R. Panji Tohpati and R. Panji Kasatriyan. Narrative continues through Panji Kasatriyan's marriage to Déwi Angrèni (Tanoyo, pp. 65-66, no. 153).

Panji Suryawisésa disguises himself as a commoner and goes to Sumedhang, where he marries Retna Waniti. Patih Padmanagara follows to Sumedhang; he becomes involved with Waniti's sister, Retna Suwati.

Empu Wiratma continues his story-telling with an account of the young Panji Kasatriyan's refusal to marry Déwi Candrakirana. An elder at court tells R. Kuda Laléyan the story of his birth. The young prince learns how his mother's (Déwi Candrakirana's) cravings during pregnancy resulted in her husband's marriage to Déwi Andayaraga of Pajang Pengging. Nyai Lelur tells Retna Suwati how Panji Kasatriyan searched for his missing wife, Retna Rondhonsari (the daughter of Resi Pancawisésa of Limaya) when she was kidnapped by Brahmana Kandha of Mt. Probably a continuation of Ranawarsita's Panji Panuba (MN 160). Poetic rendition of a portion of Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Puwara (solar years 1188–1193). Macapat verse.

This volume treats the histories of the legendary kingdoms of Pajajaran, Galuh, and Pengging. The forces of Prabu Mundhingsari of Pajajaran are defeated by those of Prabu Déwamantala of Galuh. Mundhingsari flees to Ujung Kolan, which then also falls to Galuh. Mundhingsari flees eastward to Mt. Suwéla, where he enlists the aid of Resi Poncaprabanggana. Mundhingsari and all his kinsmen depart from Mt. Suwéla to do battle against Galuh. Galuh falls. Prabu Déwamantala perishes in combat with Resi Poncaprabanggana. Mundhingsari returns home to Pajajaran where he reigns as emperor (ratu binathara). Déwamantala's younger brother, R. Kantalarasa, succeeds to the throne of Galuh. Resi Poncaprabanggana is presented with the kingdom of Pengging, and is granted the title Prabu Handayaningrat; he establishes his kraton in Salahtiga (Tanoyo, p. 69, no. 159).

This volume focuses on the history of the legendary kingdom of Pajajaran during the reign of Maha Prabu Gandakusuma, or Maha Prabu Sundha Anyakrawati, the last king of Pajajaran (Sri Pamekas). Related is the Siyungwanara tale: the child whom Sri Pamekas had meant to kill as a baby returns to the palace of Pajajaran. Posing as a smith, the boy, Radèn Siyung Wanara, is not recognized by his father. Sri Pamekas then adopts the remarkable boy and raises him up to noble status. Siyung-wanara journeys to Pengging, where he marries the daughter of Prabu Darmastuti, and then on to Rajapolah, where he marries the daughter of Prabu Madureksa. Siyung-wanara returns to Pajajaran and is installed Prabu Anom by his (adoptive and natural) father; he is granted the title Prabu Anom Banyak Widhé and a residence in Pracimantara. Banyak Widhé's elder brother, Prabu Anom Harya Tanduran, whose residence was in Purwantara, moves to sacred land in Tulangparé and receives instruction from the priest (juru pamidih), Sang Empu Artati (Tanoyo, p. 70, no. 161).

Historical romance. Jenggala - Panji Literary studies

Panji romance in macapat verse. Panji Asmarabangun (Kasatriyan) is kidnapped by the king of Parangkencana. This kidnapping takes place shortly after the birth of R. Laléyan, Panji's son born to Dèwi Galuh (Candrakirana), the princess of Kedhiri. The kidnapped Panji then marries his abductor's daughter, the princess of Parangkencana. Candrakirana goes off in search of her husband. She and her companion, Retna Jinoli (Panji's sister) are transformed into men. Candrakirana, as Radèn Klana Madubrongta, is installed as king of Bali. Following numerous intrigues, Candrakirana and Panji are reunited. The volume closes with the romance of Retna Jinoli and Radèn Wukirsari (Candrakirana's brother).

See on MS p. 802 a discussion of poetic composition.

Authorship established by a sandiasma in the poem's opening stanza:

History. Java - 0000–1000s± -- Creation-Purwa

A history of Java in macapat verse: from the Creation of the universe to the supernatural disappearance of human life from Java.

Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Bismillahi rahkemani rahim, maknanipun kang rapal bismillah, peksi sarkara tembangé, mimitya maos ulun, sarta lawan pitulung widdhi." Beginning with Allah's act of divine Creation, the text continues through the history of the left-hand descendants of Adam and Kawa (Eve): the Javano-Hindu deities and the early human kings of Java.

In this genealogical history of Java, human time is divided into ages. The first age, the Kartayoga commences with the creation of the gods Manik and Maya, and Bathara Manik's divine rule over Java. The first human king of Java is Prabu Makukuhan, an incarnation of the god Wisnu; he rules from his kraton in Medhang-kamulan. After Makukuhan's death (muksa), the first age ends, and the humans on Java are transformed into spirits. The second age, the Tirtayoga, covers the purwa cycle of the wayang repertoire. Sang Manumanasa is sent by the gods to generate a new race of humans on Java. Among Manumanasa's descendants are the Pandhawa and Kurawa princes. After the cataclysmic Bratayuda war, Parikesit, a grandson of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna, reigns as king of Java. Parikesit numbers among his descendants Prabu Watugunung of Tenggilingwesi. When Watugunung is killed by a son of the god Wisnu named Radèn Srigati, the gods install Srigati as king of Java. He reigns from Mendhang-agung (or Purwacarita). Finally the god Naraddha gathers up all the humans on Java and transforms them into spirits, thus ending the second age (Tanoyo, pp. 72-73, no. 165).

History. Java - 1000s±–1200s -- Galuh to Majapahit

A history of Java in macapat verse: from the supernatural reappearance of human life on Java to the time of Brawijaya I of Majapahit.

The human population of Java is once again reinstated, this time through the mystical powers of [Islamic] emissaries from Rum (Turkey). The ensuing age is called the Kitrah Age. The gods fetch Watugununung's son from the Terusan Cave where he has been performing asceticism to become Java's king. They install this prince, R. Sindhula, as king in Purwacarita. Upon Sindhula's death (muksa), his son (the cruel Prabu Déwatacengkar) succeeds to the throne, and reigns in Mendhang-pramesan.

At the dawn of the next age, the Dupara Age, Aji Saka, a companion of the Prophet Mohammad, makes his way to Java; he kills the evil Déwatacengkar and then succeeds him as king. Upon Aji Saka's death, R. Danéswara (Déwatacengkar's son) becomes king of Mendhang. Called Raja Kaskaya and Sri Maha Punggung, he is the ancestor of all the subsequent kings of Java. Among his descendants is Prabu Banjaransari of Galuh. The volume continues through the stories of Banjaransari's great-grandsons: R. Jaka Siyung-wanara of Pajajaran and R. Jaka Susuruh, founder of the kingdom of Majapahit (Tanoyo, p. 73, no. 166).

History. Java - 1200s–1500s -- Majapahit, Demak, Pajang, Mataram

A history of Java in macapat verse, from the time of Brawijaya I of Majapahit to the establishment of Mataram (Ki Ageng Mataram).

Beginning with the history of Prabu Brawijaya I, founder of the kingdom of Majapahit, the text continues through the reigns of his son, Brawijaya II, and grandson, Brawijaya III. Next told is the history of Java's Islamization: from the coming of saints (wali) to Java through the fall of Majapahit's kraton to Sénapati Jimbun, the Adipati of Demak. Text continues with Demak history, through the reign of Jimbun's sons, Pangéran Sabrang Lér and R. Trenggana as sultans of Demak. During Trenggana's reign, the youth Jaka Tingkir, a son of the late Kyai Ageng Pengging (hence great-grandson of the last Brawijaya) rises to power through his military prowess. Marrying Sultan Trenggana's daughter, Tingkir is made the Adipati of Pajang. Upon Trenggana's death, Adipati Pajang succeeds as the supreme political power of Java. Text continues through Adipati Pajang's struggle against Harya Panangsang; Panangsang's defeat by the forces and wiles of Ki Pamanahan; and Sunan Giri's confirmation of Sultan Pajang's kingship. Finally Ki Pamanahan moves with his kinsmen to Mataram, from whence, it is prophesied, his descendants will rule over all Java (Tanoyo, pp. 73-74, no. 167).

History. Java - 1570±–1590± -- Pajang, Mataram

A history of Mataram (ca. 1570–ca. 1590): Ki Ageng Pamanahan to Panembahan Sénapati. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Rarangkulan saha waspa mijil, kalihira kang rayi kang raka, Radèn Ngabéhi delingé."

Narrative opens with Ki Ageng Pamanahan's move to the forest of Mataram. Establishing himself there, he is henceforth known as Ki Ageng Mataram. Adipati Pajang travels to Giri where his kingship is confirmed by Sunan Giri. Ki Ageng Mataram dies and is succeeded by his son, R. Ng. Saloring Pasar (the adoptive son of Sultan Pajang). The Sultan grants the youth the name: Sénapati Ingalaga Sayidin Panatagama. When Sultan Pajang dies Sunan Kudus installs the late Sultan's son-in-law, the Adipati of Demak, as king in Pajang. Sultan Pajang's son, Pangéran Benawa joins forces with Sénapati Ngalaga and revolts. Pajang falls to Sénapati, who sends the Adipati of Demak back to Demak and installs Pangéran Benawa as king in Pajang. Henceforth Sénapati reigns as king in Mataram with the royal title of Kangjeng Panembahan. Sénapati conquers the eastern territories of Java (Madiun, Pasuruhan, Kadhiri and Rawadalem). Sénapati erects a walled kraton in Mataram (Tanoyo, pp. 74–75, no. 168).

History. Java - 1590±–1675± -- Mataram

A history of Mataram (ca. 1590–ca.1675): Panembahan Sénapati to Amangkurat I. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Ri sampuning mangkana wadya lit, pinangarahan samya akarya, bata bang myang bata putèh."

Beginning with Sénapati's erection of his walled kraton in Mataram, the narrative continues through Mataram's defeat of an invasion force led by the Adipati of East Java and the battle of Pathi. Sénapati dies and is succeeded by his son (Panembahan Séda Krapyak), during whose reign a revolt in Demak is put down. Upon Séda Krapyak's death, his son, Pangéran Martapura, reigns only momentarily, and then Martapura's elder brother, Pangéran Rangsang, ascends the throne. It is he who will reign as Prabu Pandhita Nyakrakusuma (a.k.a. Kangjeng Sultan Agung) Under Agung's suzerainty, Mataram's armies rage over all Java, conquering most of the east and central portions of the island. His forces fail to defeat the Dutch in Batavia, however. Sultan Agung is succeeded by his son, Pangéran Harya Mataram, who reigns as Kangjeng Susuhunan Amangkurat [I]. The new king moves the kraton to Plérèd. A cruel ruler, Amangkurat is opposed by his own son who plots with the Madurese prince, R. Trunajaya. Warriors fleeing from Makasar join forces with Trunajaya (see Tanoyo, pp. 75–77, no. 169).

History. Java - 1675±–1700± -- Mataram, Kartasura

A history of Mataram (ca. 1675 to ca. 1700): Amangkurat I and Amangkurat II. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Asmarandana: "Siwi ratu mihing mangkin, ya iku sira miluwa, iku dadiya kanthiné."

Trunajaya, in alliance with Kraèng Glèngsong of Makasar, musters his troops in Surabaya. Trunajaya assumes the title Panembahan Maduretna Panatagama. The kraton of Mataram in Plérèd falls to the forces of Trunajaya. Amangkurat I flees westward with his two sons, the crown prince (who had been Trunajaya's secret co-conspirator) and P. Puger. While Puger is sent back to fight for Mataram, the king and crown prince continue their flight. The refugee Amangkurat I dies in Tegal. Meanwhile, Puger has established himself as king in Mataram, reigning over the ravaged palace with the title Sunan Ngalaga. The crown prince, inspired to make his bid for power, sends emissaries to Batavia to request Dutch aid. The crown prince is installed as Amangkurat II with Dutch assistance. The new king and his Dutch allies do battle in East Java and eventually defeat Trunajaya. Amangkurat II returns to Central Java where he and his Dutch allies establish a new kraton in Kartasura. Sunan Ngalaga (P. Puger), who, it is said, takes Amangkurat II to be a Dutch admiral, is eventually pacified by his elder brother. The latter portion of this volume includes the history of Untung Surapati (in Batavia, Kartasura, and Pasuruhan) (See Tanoyo, pp. 77–78, no. 170).

Volume opens with the dying Amangkurat II's advice to his son and heir, the crown prince. When the old king dies, the crown prince succeeds him as Amangkurat III, or Amangkurat Mas (1703). Pangéran Puger, the new king's uncle and father-in-law, revolts; fleeing to Semarang, Puger is crowned king Pakubuwana I by the Dutch (1704). Pakubuwana with his mixed Dutch and Javanese army (bala bacingah) invades and defeats Kartasura. Amangkurat III flees to East Java, where he eventually surrenders to the Dutch (1708). Volume continues through the reign of Pakubuwana I's son and successor, Amangkurat IV (1719–26), or Amangkurat Mas, up to his death and the succession of his son as Pakubuwana II in 1726. 346 pp.; 31.5 x 19.5 cm.
History. Java - 1100±–1400± -- Ajisaka–Majapahit

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning in classical times with the arrival of Ajisaka in Java, extending through the establishment of the kingdom of Majapahit. Poem open in Sinom: "Ri kala anedhak, Srat Ajisaka Ngajawi, Dité Manis kaping rolas."

Narrative begins with the reign of Prabu Sindhula, the legendary king of classical Galuh. When Sindhula vanishes together with his kraton, his evil son, Prabu Déwatacengkar, succeeds as king of Java. Déwatacengkar is then defeated by the foreign colonial Ajisaka, who subsequently reigns as king in Mendhang-kamulan. When Ajisaka dies (muksa), he is succeeded by Déwatacengkar's son, Raja Danéswara (a.k.a. Sri Mapunggung), who reigns in Mendhang-pramesan until his death (muksa). Danéswara's son, Sri Kandhiawan (the ancestor of all subsequent Javanese kings), succeeds to his father's throne. Among his descendants is Prabu Banjaransari of Jenggala. When Banjaransari's kraton in Jenggala is destroyed, he flees westward and establishes his new kraton in Galuh, where he reigns as Bathara Déwaji. After him, his descendants rule in orderly succession, from generation to generation: Sri Déwata Harya Bangah, to Sri Mundhingwangi, to Prabu Nyakrawati (Pajajaran), to Siyung-wanara (Pajajaran), and finally to R. Susuruh (Majapahit) (Tanoyo, p. 82, no. 180).

Beginning with Allah's act of divine Creation, the text continues through the history of the left-hand descendants of Adam and Kawa (Eve): the Javano-Hindu deities and the early human kings of Java. In this genealogical history of Java, human time is divided into ages. The first age, the Kartayoga, commences with the creation of the gods Manik and Maya and Bathara Manik's divine rule over Java. The first human king of Java is Prabu Mangkukuhan, an incarnation of the god Wisnu, who rules from his kraton in Medhang-kamulan. After Mangkukuhan's death (muksa) the humans of Java are transformed into spirits.

The second age, the Tirtayoga, covers the classical period depicted in the purwa cycle of the wayang repertoire. Sang Manumanasa is sent by the gods to generate a new race of humans; among his descendants are the Pandhawa and Kurawa princes. After the cataclysmic Bratayuda war, Parikesit , a grandson of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna, reigns as king of Java. Parikesit numbers among his descendants Prabu Watugunung of Tenggilingwesi. When Watugunung is killed by a son of the god Wisnu named R. Srigati, the gods install Srigati as king of Java. He reigns from Mendhang-agung (or Purwacarita). Finally the god Naraddha gathers up all the humans in Java and transforms them into spirits.

In the next age, the Kitrah Age, emissaries from Rum (Turkey) magically restore Java's human population to visibility. At that time the gods fetch Watugununung's son from the Terusan Cave where he has been performing asceticism to become Java's king. They install this prince, R. Sindhula, as king in Purwacarita. Upon Sindhula's death (muksa), his son, the cruel Prabu Déwatacengkar, succeeds to the throne, reigning in Mendhang-pramesan.

At the dawn of the next age, the Dupara Age, Aji Saka, a companion of the Prophet Mohammad, makes his way to Java; he kills the evil Déwatacengkar and then succeeds him as king. Upon Aji Saka's death, R. Danéswara, Déwatacengkar's son, becomes king of Mendhang. Called Raja Kaskaya and Sri Maha Punggung, he is the ancestor of all the subsequent kings of Java. Among his descendants is Prabu Banjaransari of Galuh. The narrative continues through the adventures of Banjaransari's great-grandsons: R. Jaka Siyung-wanara of Pajajaran and R. Jaka Susuruh (that is, Prabu Brawijaya I, founder of the kingdom of Majapahit). The text continues through the reigns Brawijaya II and Brawijaya III. Following is a history of Java's Islamization: from the coming of saints (wali) to Java through the fall of Majapahit's kraton to Sénapati Jimbun, the Adipati of Demak. The narrative continues with Demak history through the reigns of Jimbun's sons Pangéran Sabrang Lèr and Radèn Trenggana as sultans of Demak. During Trenggana's reign, the youth Jaka Tingkir, a son of the late Kyai Ageng Pengging (hence great-grandson of the last Brawijaya) begins his rise to power (Tanoyo, pp. 83–84, no. 177).

Poem is dated 14 Madilawal Éhé 1740 (15 May 1813); sangkala: "sirna [0] catur [4] swara [7] tunggalé [1]." The poem was written, after a version attributed to Sunan Giri, by M. Ng. Rongga Panambangan, probably by M. Ng. Rongga Panambangan II, who served as chief minister of the Mangkunagaran Palace under Mangkunagara I–II. The MS may have been completed by his son, M. Ng. History. Java - 1100±–1550± -- Ajisaka–Pajang

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning in classical times with the reign of Sri Sindhula in Purwacarita, and extending to the reign of Sultan Pajang in mid sixteenth-century Pajang. Poem opens in Sinom: "Anulya Bethara Brama, medalke[n ingkang] agni, kang wana winalagaran."

The narrative opens in medias res, with a history of Galuh during the reign of Prabu Sindhula of Purwacarita; the Galuh history then continues through Ajisaka's coming to Java and then up to the reign of Prabu Banjaransari. The narrative then proceeds with histories of ancient Pajajaran and Majapahit, extending through the early Islamization of Java and the period of Demak's political ascendancy. The final pages of this history treat the establishment of the kingdom of Pajang. See also Tanoyo, pp. 86–87, no. 180.

History. Java - 0000–1676 -- Creation–Trunajaya wars

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning with Nabi Adam and extending to the time of Amangkurat I of Mataram (1676). The history opens in Dhangdhanggula:

> Anglir silem tembang madugendhis, winiwitan Kanem ingkang mongsa, Jumungah Wagé dinané, trus warna giri ratu, sengkalané ingkang winarni, nenggih ing wulan Sapar tanggal wolulikur, taun Jimawal lumampah, sarta ingkang kawarna angkaning warsi, ingkang leres kaétang.

sakathahé ingkang tinutur ing mangkin, tuturing para raja.

Poem opens with the creation of Adam and proceeds genealogically through the generation of the gods, especially Sanghyang Guru's five children: Sambo, Brama, Madéwa, Wisnu, and Sri. Text continues with the history of the god Wisnu on Java, who reigns as king Setmata to counterbalance the power of King Watugunung of Gilingwesi. After Watugunung's death at Wisnu's hands, the god Brama becomes king of Gilingwesi and also the ancestor of all the subsequent kings of Java.

One of Sanghyang Brama's descendants is Prabu Banjaransari II of Mendhang-kamulan. When his realm is struck by disaster, Banjaransari II moves west and establishes a new kraton in Galuh. After him his elder son, R. Wanènggada, reigns as king of Galuh until he moves on to Batawiyah (that is, Batavia). Banjaransari's younger son, R. Rejakusuma, establishes the kingdom of Pajajaran. It is at this time that the European adventurer Baron Sekéndhér comes to Java; he is defeated and transformed into a white devil. Next comes the European Baron Sukmul, who tricks his Javanese opponents into letting him set up a factory in Jakarta-Batavia. When Prabu Rejakusuma of Pajajaran dies, he is succeeded by his son, Mundhingsari; Mundhingsari is succeeded by Mundhingwangi; Mundhingwangi's son is Pajajaran's last major king. His son's are R. Siyung-wanara (a.k.a. Harya Banyak Widhé) and R. Susuruh, the founder of Majapahit. At this time the Dutch Kapitan Mur Jangkung (that is, Jan Pieterszoon Coen) arrives in Jakarta.

The narrative continues with Majapahit history, treating the reigns of Sang Prabu Anom, Sri Adaningkung, Sri Hayamwuruk, Sri Lembu Amisani, Sri Bra Tanjung, and Sri Brawijaya Wekasan. The poem continues with an account of the early Islamization of Java and the conquest of Majapahit by the forces of Demak. The text continues with dynastic histories of Demak and Pajang.

The text continues with the history of Mataram, from its establishment by Ki Ageng Pamanahan (= Ki Ageng Mataram), through its rise to political ascendancy under Pamanahan's son, Sénapati Ingalaga. The history continues through the reigns of Panembahan Séda Krapyak, Kangjeng Sultan Agung, and Amangkurat I. Text breaks off shortly before the fall of the Kraton at Plérèd to the forces of the Madurese rebel Trunajaya (Tanoyo, pp. 87–89, no. 181).

History. Java - 0000–1590± -- Creation–Mataram

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning with Nabi Adam and extending to Panembahan Sénapati's erection of the walled kraton of Mataram (late sixteenth century). "Major Surakarta Babad."

This history was produced at the Karaton Surakarta in the late eighteenth century; it is conventionally attributed to the pujongga Radèn Ngabéhi Yasadipura I. The young Pakubuwana IV commissioned the history less than three months after his ascent to the throne. The date of commission is 15 Rabinyulawal Alip 1715 (14 December 1788); sangkala: "margèng [5] nata [1] kaswarèng [7] dasih [1].

History. Java - 1676±–1690 -- Mataram, Kartasura

A history of Mataram-Kartasura (ca. 1676–90): reigns of Amangkurat I–II and the Trunajaya Wars. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula:

Salasa Legi tanggal ping kalih, wulan Mukharam winuwus Sancaya, kérangan Sadha mangsané, ing wuku Julungpujut, iku rasa swaraning raja, ing Surakarta tuwan, juru basa nurun, Serat Babad ing Mataram, mung jinujug kalajeng Pangran Dipati, anglurug arsa budhal.

Narrative opens with the outset of the Trunajaya wars. The Madurese rebel Trunajaya, having allied himself with the forces of Kraéng Galéngsong, occupies Surabaya. Trunajaya and his troops attack and conquer Mataram (1677). Amangkurat I flees westward with the crown prince and Pangéran Puger. At Jenar, Puger is sent back to regain the fallen kraton. The king and crown prince continue on to Banyumas where Amangkurat dies. Meanwhile, Puger musters his forces and retakes Mataram. Then the crown prince, inspired to make his bid for power, succeeds his father as Amangkurat II and makes an alliance with the Dutch. With Dutch support Mangkurat II journeys to the east in pursuit of Trunajaya whom he eventually defeats and kills (1680). Amangkurat then returns to Central Java and establishes a new kraton in Kartasura. Puger at first refuses to submit, mistaking his brother for a Dutch admiral, but is eventually pacified (1681). Text continues on through the installation of Amangkurat II's son as crown prince. For more detailed notes on contents, see Tanoyo, pp. 89–91, no. 182.

History. Java - 0000–1540± -- Creation–Demak

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning with Nabi Adam and ending with the banishment of Jaka Tingkir from Demak. "Major Surakarta Babad." Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Munggèng sarkara ring ngukara nis."

The history was commissioned by Pakubuwana IV in December 1788 (see notes to MN 189 above). The present MS, by or commissioned by R.M. Gondakusuma (the future Mangkunagara IV), is dated Tumpak Manis, 8 Besar Alip 1763 (26 March 1836); sangkala: "ninging [3] rasa [6] cipta [7] sawiji [1]."

History opens with Adam and proceeds genealogically through the generation of the gods to the five children of Sanghyang Guru: Samba, Brama, Mahadéwa, Wisnu, and Sri. Wisnu becomes king in Java with the title Prabu Setmata. At this time Prabu Watugunung of Gilingwesi attacks heaven (Suralaya) and is defeated by Wisnu. Sanghyang Brama, succeeding to Gilingwesi's throne, becomes ancestor to all the subsequent kings of Java. Brama's descendant Sri Pamekas is the last great king of Pajajaran. Sri Pamekas has two sons: R. Siyung-wanara and R. Susuruh. Siyung-wanara kills his father and ascends the throne. Susuruh avenges his father and founds the kingdom of Majapahit. Susuruh's descendants succeed to Majapahits's throne: Sang Prabu Anom, Sri Adaningkung, Sri Hayamwuruk, Sri Lembuamisani, Sri Bra Tanjung, and finally Sri Brawijaya. The saints (wali) bring Islam to Java during the last king of Majapahit's reign. The wali incite Brawijaya's son, the Adipati of Bintara (that is, Demak), to revolt. The forces of Demak attack and conquer the kraton of Majapahit. After a forty-day conditional reign by the wali Sunan Giri, Adipati Bintara is installed as Java's supreme ruler: Sénapati Jimbun, or Sultan Demak I. The history continues up to the reign of R. Trenggana as Sultan Demak III. During Trenggana's reign, Jaka Tingkir (a grandson of the last king of Majapahit) begins his rise to power (Tanoyo, pp. 91–92, no. 183).

History. Java - 1560±–1629 -- Pajang–Mataram

A history of Pajang and Mataram (ca. 1560–1629): from Sultan Pajang to Sultan Agung. Macapat verse. Volume opens with an account of Sultan Pajang's campaign against Harya Panangsang of Jipang. When the forces of Ki Pamanahan succeed in killing Panangsang, Sultan Pajang awards Pamanahan the uncultivated territory of Mataram. Pamanahan (henceforth Ki Ageng Mataram) and his kinsmen move to Mataram and establish a settlement. Under Pamanahan's son, Ki Ng. Loringpasar (a.k.a. Sénapati Ingalaga), Mataram grows in strength. Sénapati opposes his overlord and adoptive father, Sultan Pajang. Upon the Sultan's death, Sénapati becomes the preeminent power in Java. Text continues up to the reign of Sénapati's grandson, Sultan Agung; volume closes with an account of Agung's unsuccessful struggle against the Dutch settlement in Batavia. For a more detailed synopsis of contents, see Tanoyo, p. 93, no. 186.

The text of this volume opens abruptly at p. 601 in mid-line. This volume comprises the numbered folio sections 50–74 of what had apparently been a series titled Murtasiyah. The volumes preceding this MS in the series are apparently no longer extant in the Reksa Pustaka manuscript collection.

History. Java - 1560±–1615 -- Pajang–Mataram

A history of Pajang and Mataram (ca. 1560–1615): from Sultan Pajang to Sultan Agung. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Pangkur:

> Sekar Pangkur wirnarnaa, guguneman kelawan Ki Penjawi, katiga lan ipénipun, Kyai Juru westanya, pan punika saparané nora kantun, lan papat lan ingkang putra, sekawan Radyan Ngabéhi.

Volume opens with an account of Sultan Pajang's campaign against Harya Panangsang of Jipang. Ki Pamanahan and Ki Penjawi act as Sultan Pajang's champions. When their forces succeed in killing Panangsang, Sultan Pajang awards Pamanahan the Mataram territory; Penjawi is awarded Pathi. Pamanahan (henceforth Ki Ageng Mataram) and his kinsmen move to Mataram and establish a settlement. Under Pamanahan's son, Ki Ng. Loringpasar (a.k.a. Sénapati Ingalaga), Mataram grows in strength. Sénapati opposes his overlord and adoptive father, Sultan Pajang. Upon the Sultan's death, Sénapati becomes the preeminent power in Java. Text continues up to the reign of Sénapati's grandson, Sultan Agung; volume closes with an account of Agung's conquest of Wirasaba in East Java. History. Java - 1450±–1550± -- Majapahit–Demak
History. Islam/Java - 1400s–1500s -- Wali

A history of Majapahit and Demak (ca. 1460–ca.1550): the final days of Majapahit to the marriage of Jaka Tingkir and the princess of Demak. Macapat verse.

Thirty-five cantos. Poem opens in Sinom: "Mangkana caritanira, sang prabu ing Maospahit."

Volume begins with the story of Brawijaya's marriage to the Princess of Cempa, continues with numerous histories of the saints (wali) who are said to have brought Islam to Java, through the conquest of Majapahit by Brawijaya's son, the Adipati of Bintara (i.e., Demak). Adipati Bintara fights under the patronage, guidance, and authority of the wali, and it is they who install him as the first Sultan of Demak. The history continues through the reign of Demak's third Sultan, Sultan Trenggana. During Trenggana's reign, the youth Jaka Tingkir, a son of the late Kyai Ageng Pengging (hence great-grandson of the last Brawijaya) begins his rise to power. Volume closes with an account of Jaka Tingkir's marriage to Trenggana's daughter. Volume also includes histories of the rural Central Javanese antecedents of the Mataram dynasts (i.e., the Bondhan Kajawèn and Jaka Tarup tales). Also treated is the history of Pengging, including the Jaka Sengara-Suksmalengkara tale and the history of Ki Ageng Pengging. See also, Tanoyo pp. 94–95, no. 188.

The beginning cantos of the poem treat the reign of Sultan Pajang, especially Sultan Pajang's campaign against Harya Panangsang of Jipang. When the forces of Ki Pamanahan succeed in killing Panangsang, Sultan Pajang awards Pamanahan the uncultivated territory of Mataram. Pamanahan (henceforth Ki Ageng Mataram) and his kinsmen move to Mataram and establish a settlement. Under Pamanahan's son, Ki Ng. Loringpasar (a.k.a. Sénapati Ingalaga), Mataram grows in strength. History. Java - 1703–1720 -- Kartasura

A history of Kartasura (1703–20): Amangkurat II to Amangkurat Jawi. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Ingkang putra ingandikan énjing, malah léngser dénira winulang."

History begins with an account of Amangkurat II's death that features the dying king's literary, and other, teachings to his son and heir, the crown prince. When the old king dies, the crown prince succeeds him as Amangkurat III, or Amangkurat Mas (1703). Pangéran Puger, the new king's uncle and father-in-law, revolts; fleeing to Semarang, he is crowned king Pakubuwana I by the Dutch (1704). Pakubuwana, together with his mixed Dutch and Javanese army, invades and defeats Kartasura. Amangkurat III flees to East Java, where he eventually surrenders to the Dutch (1708). Narrative continues with an account of the accession to the throne of Pakubuwana I's son and heir, Amangkurat IV, or Amangkurat Jawi (1719–26). Final cantos treat the revolt of Amangkurat Jawi's brothers, Pangérans Blitar and Purbaya. See also Tanoyo pp. 96–97, no. 191.

History. Java - 1200s–1600 -- Galuh–Mataram

A history of Java (ca. 1200s–1600): Banjaransari-Galuh to Panembahan Sénapati-Mataram. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Mijil: "Sekar Mijil ingkang kinarya wit, gancaring cariyos, ing nalika wiwit panuraté, apanuju ari Senen Legi, ping lima marengi, Pasa wulanipun."

History opens with the reign of Prabu Banjaransari, first in Koripan and then in Galuh. When the old king Banjaransari is transformed into a god, he is succeeded by his son, Prabu Anom Wanagada. Wanagada moves to Batawiyah-Jakarta. Banjaransari's younger son, Prabu Anom Harjakusuma founds the kingdom of Pajajaran. Volume treats Pajajaran history through the reigns of Harjakusuma, Mundhingsari, Mundhingwangi, Sri Ciliawan, and Siyungwanara (a.k.a. Banyakwidhé). Sri Ciliawan's elder son, Radèn Jaka Susuruh, founds the kingdom of Majapahit.

This history includes the unusual tale of Siyungwanara's attempt to form an alliance with Medinah. When he meets with no success in this attempt, Siyungwanara turns to ascetic practice on the mountain top; there, cursed by the gods, he is transformed into a turtledove. The narrative also includes an account of the coming of the Europeans to Java with a history of the arrival in Jakarta of Mur Jangkung (that is, Jan Pieterszoon Coen).

Brawijaya of Majapahit (né R. Susuruh) dies and is succeeded by his son, Sang Prabu Anom. Prabu Anom, reigning as Brawijaya, is murdered; he is succeeded by Grand Vizier Gajah Mada's son, Sang Udara. Then Udara is murdered in turn; his murderer is Brawijaya-Prabu Anom's son, Radèn Murdaningkung. Murdaningkung then takes the throne. Upon his death, he is succeeded by his son, R. Lembu Amisani, (a.k.a. Maha Prabu Brawijaya). When this Brawijaya dies, his son succeeds to the throne, where he reigns as Prabu Brakumara until the gods transform him into the spirit king of the Ketangga forest. Brakumara's son then succeeds as king of Majapahit. This son, Prabu Anom Angkawijaya, reigns as the last Brawijaya.

It is during the last Brawijaya's reign that the wali (saints) introduce Islam to Java. These wali incite Brawijaya's son, Adipati Bintara (i.e., Demak) to revolt. Majapahit's kraton falls, and supreme political power in Java devolves upon the wali. Adipati Bintara is installed by the wali as the first Sultan of Demak. The history then continues with a focus on Demak through the reigns of the first Sultan's two sons and successors (Sabrang Lér and Trenggana).

During Sultan Trenggana's reign, Jaka Tingkir, a son of the rural leader Ki Ageng Pengging and a great-grandson of the last Brawijaya, rises to power. He establishes the kingdom of Pajang. His reign is marked by strife with Arya Panangsang of Jipang, a son of (the murdered) Sabrang Lér. Sultan Pajang's faithful courtiers, Ki Ageng Pamanahan and Ki Penjawi, defeat Arya Panangsang. Penjawi is rewarded with the territory of Pathi; Pamanahan, with the territory of Mataram. Pamanahan's son, Sénapati Ingalaga, is adopted by Sultan Pajang. This son then resists the overlordship Pajang and sets up the independent realm of Mataram. Sénapati consolidates his power and pursues campaigns of military conquest in East Java (Tanoyo, pp. 101–3, no. 197).

A history of Mataram (ca. 1590–1677): Panembahan Sénapati to Sri Susuhunan Ngalaga (Pangéran Puger). Macapat verse. Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Purwaning rèh kang ingadu manis, anujwa ri Saptu jam sangènjang, ing wulan Rajap rikang lèk, tanggal kaping tri nuju, ing Kuningan kalima akir, taun Wawu Sengara, ing sengkalanipun, nabi nem amulang raja, anedhak srat, Babat awal ning Matawis, duk mangyasani kitha."

History begins with Sénapati's erection of a walled fortress around his kraton and continues through the reigns of his descendants: Panembahan Séda Krapyak, Sultan Agung, and Amangkurat I. During Amangkurat I's reign, the kraton of Plérèd falls to the Madurese rebel, Trunajaya (1677). Amangkurat I flees westward and dies a refugee in Banyumas. History. Java - 0000 – -- Creation to Sri Makukuhan

A history of ancient Java: from the Creation of the universe to the reign of Mangukuhan in Mendhangkamulan. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula:

> Giyuhing tyas dénya mrih manising, wasita geng-gengé kang kagungan, tan gumunggung pangiketé, pan saking karsanipun, Kangjeng Pangran Harya Mantawis, terang ingkang timbalan, Kangjeng kang Sinuhun Susuhunan Pakubuwana, Sénapati Ngalaga Ngaburrahmani, Sayid Panatagama.

This history was composed upon commission of Pakubuwana VII and was expressly meant to fuse "Right" (Islamic) and "Left" (Hindu) genealogical histories of the Mataram dynasts. Beginning with Nabi Adam the history continues to the reign of Sri Mangukuhan, Mendhangkamulan. Volume closes with the transformations of Mangukuhan's children into animals: Déwi Sri into a snake and R. Sadana into a bird. See also Tanoyo, pp. 104-5, no. 200.

R. Ng. Sindusastra, a well-known Surakarta court-poet, composed the text in consultation with R. Ng. Ronggawarsita and others (see canto I, stanzas 6–8). The history was composed upon the commission of Pakubuwana VII and is dated 16 Dulkangidah Dal 1767 (20 January 1840). Note the poem's especially complex dating system (canto I, stanzas 13–15). This MS copy was evidently produced upon commission of the Karaton Surakarta noble, K.P.H. Harya Mataram [II].

An historical poem relating the strife between two Islamic teachers set in the early years of Pakubuwana II's reign (1726–49). Macapat verse.

Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Murwèng sarkara mangukara nis, datan sumengkèng pustaka, ing tyas rujit karejeté."

The text includes mystical Islamic analyses of classical Javanese literary texts (e.g., Serat Dèwa Ruci). The second half of the volume focuses on the adventures and experiences of the young prince Mangkubumi (and future Hamengkubuwana I, Yogyakarta). See Soebardi, The Book of Cabolek (The Hague: Martinus Nijhoff, 1975).

History: Karaton Surakarta (1834-35). Macapat verse. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Kasmaran déné wawarti, Jeng Gusti Pangran Dipatya, Harya Kusumayudané."

Poem composes a history of the mission to fetch the bride of Pakubuwana VII from Madura in 1834-35. The mission was led by the king's brother, K.G.P.A.A. Kusumayuda. Poem was composed by Jayèngrana, whom Kusumayuda ordered to come along on this mission for the express purpose of recording the events in verse (see MS pp. 1–6, 250–52). The text also includes the moralistic teachings of Kusumayuda to his children and an account of the romance of two Dutch girls with two Surakarta nobles. Cf. KS 80A and RP 56–57.

Poem is dated Senèn Wagé, 4 Rabingulakir Dal 1767 (17 June 1839); sangkala: "jaran [7] nenem [6] kréta [7] siji [1]." Copy by (or for) K.P.H. Kol. Purbanagara dated Besar 1790 (June 1862); sangkala: "nir [0] wiwara [9] kang pandhita [7] aji [1]" (see MS pp. 6–7).

Script resembles that of the Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn.

History. Java - 1742–1745 -- Kartasura, Surakarta
History. Java, Mangkunagaran - 1742–1745

A history of Kartasura (1742–45): Pacinan history. Focus of the text is upon R.M. Sahid (P.A.A. Mangkunagara I), founder of the Mangkunagaran dynasty. Macapat verse. Volume opens in Sinom: "Sang nata anulya mangkat, lajeng dhumateng Mentawis." Canto II (in Pangkur) begins: "Yata wau kang kocapa, kang abaris Ngayogya kang winarni." Canto III (in Asmarandana) begins: "Dalu gènnya ukih-ingukih, wadya Cina binéndrong senjata."

History opens in the period after the retreat of the forces of Sunan Mas Prabu Kuning from the Kartasura to Randhulawang, Laroh. At this time, Pakubuwana II's nephew, R. Suryakusuma (that is, R.M. Sahid), leaves the kraton and makes for the district of Laroh, where he joins forces with Sunan Mas Prabu Kuning. Suryakusuma is promoted and granted the name, Pangéran Prangwedana. Soon installed as commander, the prince is awarded yet another new name, P.H. Mangkunagara. After Sunan Kuning's defeat, Mangkunagara flees eastward in his company. When they reach Caruban, Mangkunagara stops and turns back for Sukawati. Sunan Kuning continues eastward, finally surrendering to the Dutch in Surabaya.

Mangkunagara remains in rebellion. By this time he is called P. Adipati Mangkunagara. Panembahan Puger brings word to Mangkunagara that Pangéran Cakraningrat of Sampang is willing to join forces with him; Puger also tries to persuade Pakubuwana II's younger brother, Pangéran Mangkubumi, to revolt. Mangkubumi comes to Sukawati; but instead of joining forces with the rebels, he fights and defeats Puger. Meanwhile, Mangkunagara has been encamped in Sidayu. He shelters the fleeing Puger and is installed by his new Madurese allies as Susuhunan Adiprakosa. He continues his rebellion. At volume's end Mangkunagara (Adiprakosa) is camped on the southern slope of Mt. Gajahmungkur. Pangéran Mangkubumi, meanwhile, has returned to Kartasura. The king, Pakubuwana II, then moves his kraton to Surakarta (Tanoyo, pp. 109–10, no. 214).

The account of the move of the kraton provided by this text differs significantly from the conventional one. In this variant text, the Dutch force Pakubuwana II, against his will, to make the historic move to Surakarta (see text's final canto in Asmarandana metre).

A faded note on p. iii reads: "punika dina Selasa Pahing tanggal ping. . . sasi Dulkangi. . . Punika ingkang gadhah serat Dèn Mas Kusrim."

A difficult (rustic?) script, perhaps from Surakarta. The inscription appears to date from the late eighteenth or early nineteenth century.

Ponorogo bark paper.

MS leaves double-page numbered 1–153.

MS was transliterated into Latin longhand script in 1985–86 by R. Ng. Mulyadi Mulyohutomo.

History. Java - 1743–1747 -- Pacinan, Giyanti wars
History. Java, Mangkunagaran - 1743–1747

A history of Central Java (1743–47) with a focus on the career of R.M. Sahid (Mangkunagara I). Pacinan, Giyanti history. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Sinom: "Sinekaran roning kamal."

Volume opens after the return of Pakubuwana II to the Kartasura kraton. The king's nephew, R. Suryakusuma, has joined forces with the retreating Sunan Kuning in Randhulawang, Laroh. Suryakusuma is promoted and granted the name, Pangéran Prangwedana. Soon installed as commander, the prince is awarded yet another new name, P.H. Mangkunagara. After Sunan Kuning's defeat, Mangkunagara flees eastward in his company. When they reach Caruban, Mangkunagara stops and turns back for Sukawati. Sunan Kuning continues eastward, finally surrendering to the Dutch in Surabaya.

Mangkunagara remains in rebellion. By this time he is called P. Adipati. Panembahan Puger brings word to Mangkunagara that P. Cakraningrat of Sampang is willing to join forces with him; Puger also tries to persuade P. Mangkubumi to revolt. Mangkubumi comes to Sukawati, but instead of joining forces with the rebels, he fights and defeats Puger. Meanwhile Mangkunagara has been encamped in Sidayu. He shelters the fleeing Puger and is installed by his new Madurese allies as Susuhunan Adiprakosa. He continues his rebellion. P. Mangkubumi, meanwhile, has returned to Kartasura. The king, Pakubuwana II, then moves his kraton to Surakarta. Pakubuwana II sends Mangkubumi to meet the forces of P. Mangkunagara which are advancing on Mataram. Mangkunagara is defeated and retreats to Panambangan in Laroh district. Mangkubumi returns to Kartasura. When Pakubuwana II negotiates a new treaty with the Dutch Governor General that is detrimental both to the interests of the Javanese court and to Mangkubumi personally, Mangkubumi revolts. He then enters into alliance with Mangkunagara (Tanoyo, pp. 110–12, no. 215).

Copy begun on 19 Jumadilawal Dal 1783 (7 February 1855); sangkala: "tri [3] asta [8] pan saptaning [7] rat [1]" and completed on Kemis Legi, Jumadilawal Bé 1784 (6 February 1856). MS originally belonged to "Bok Ajeng Gunapawira" (see p. 285).

Inscribed: Surakarta, 1769–77
Scribe: [Mangkunagara I, P.A.; s.n.]
ii, 214 pp.; 18.3 x 12.5 cm.
Compilation

Compilation of thirteen texts. The volume belonged to and appears to have been compiled by P.A. Mangkunagara I, the founder of the Mangkunagaran principality. The main body of the MS was inscribed in Surakarta from 1769 to 1777; there are several emendations from later years of the 18th century, however. Portions of the MS appear to be original autograph compositions of Mangkunagara I. Other parts of MS were possibly written by Bagus Aruman of "Surakarta Pradiningrat "(see pp. 55–56, 169) and Kyai Ngustail of "Ngabéyang" [Ngabeyan?] (p. 193).

In AJ 1695 (1769/70), Mangkunagara I loaned the MS to his son-in-law, R.T. Suryanagara of the Kaduwang district (see p. 211).

Bibliographical notes read the volume in the following order: items 1–2, pp. 1–46; items 3–7, pp. 130–48 (back to front, i.e., pp. 83–77 upside-down); item 8, pp. 151–131 (back to front and upside-down); items 9–10, pp. 153–163; items 11–13, pp. 214–164 (back to front).

Eighteenth-century Surakarta script, with portions of the text in Arabic script.

MS inscribed on Ponorogo bark paper. MS is provided with some decorative illumination in colored inks.

MS leaves numbered 1–214; no p.# 147, p.# 174 x 2. The following pages are blank: 15–16, 35–36, 42–45, 81–82, 85–86, 135–36, 139–40, 143–44, 154–55, 177–78, 181–82, 189–90, 203–04.

History. Java, Mangkunagaran - 1867–1920 -- Mangkunagaran Court. Mangkunagaran - Ceremony

History of the Mangkunagaran principality (1867–1920), with notes concerning palace ceremony. Prose. Concise biographies of Mangkunagara IV (r. 1853–81), Mangkunagara V (r. 1881–96), Mangkunagara VI (r. 1896–1916), and Mangkunagara VII (r. 1916–44).

This signed autograph MS begins with a sketch of the routine daily activities of Mangkunagara IV. Text includes extensive notes on the arts and ceremonials of the Mangkunagaran palace as well as informative discussions on the successions of Mangkunagara V, VI, and VII. An appended note at volume's end records the death of Mangkunagara VII (July 1944).

Inserted in the volume is an undated, unsigned letter to "Kangjeng Gusti" (probably Mangkunagara VII) from one of his courtiers; this letter informs the prince of an early morning romantic liaison between two other servants of the court.

A biography of Prangwadana VII from his birth on 12 November 1885 (3 Sapar, Dal 1815) to the celebration of his thirty-second Javanese birthday 30 November 1916 (3 Sapar Dal 1847). Macapat verse. Poem opens in Sinom: "Rarasing gita sri nata."

Poem is dated Dité Manis, 7 Puwasa Alip 1851 (15 May 1921).

The author, R. Ng. Citrasantana, was a teacher in the Mangkunagaran school, Pamulangan Siswa Rini. In his introduction, the author states that the poem was commissioned by Prince Prangwadana VII. Citrasantana goes on to explain his writing style and to identify the sources he consulted to write this biography. Among the cited sources are Reksa Pustaka books, Prangwadana VII's writings, interviews, and the author's own memories.

This MS is a working draft for approximately the first 160 pp. of Citrasantana's later extended version of the poem (MN 230).

A history of the life of Prangwadana VII from his birth on 12 November 1885, to March 1924. Macapat verse. Poem opens is sinom: "Rarasing gita sri nata."

Date of composition is said to be Dité Manis, 7 Puwasa Alip 1851 (15 May 1921); see MS p. 2, MN 229A, and notes below.

The author, R. Ng. Citrasantana, was a teacher in the Mangkunagaran school, Pamulangan Siswa Rini. In his introduction, the author states that it was his own decision to compose the poem. Citrasantana goes on to explain his writing style and to identify as the sources for this biography: Reksa Pustaka books, interviews, and his own memories. Compare and contrast this introduction with that to MN 229A, first volume of a working draft for this poem. I noted above that the author claims to have composed this history in 1921 (this is consistent with the date of his working draft). But insofar as the present MS treats events up to March 1924 and the introduction mentions "Mangkunagara VII" (a title the prince did not attain until September 1924), this version of the history could not have been written earlier than September 1924.

Script is in the difficult cursive hand of Citrasantana.

History. Java, Mangkunagaran - Genealogy -- Panambangan
History. Java, Mangkunagaran - 1740s–1790s
Didactic literature. Statecraft

Didactic moralistic poem treating Central Javanese history (1740s–1790s). Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Wedharing rèh nenggih Mas Ngabéhi, Rongga Panambangan Mangkunagaran, ing smangkya saweg karsané." The poem was composed by the elderly Mangkunagaran courtier, M.Ng. Rongga Panambangan III, for the edification of his children and grandchildren. MS is dated 13 Besar, Bé 1776 (10 November 1848), sangkala: "bah [6] pandhita [7] swara [7] ratu [1]."

The poem begins with the "right" and "left" genealogies of the Panambangan family. It continues with sketches of Central Javanese history that are provided with moralistic interpretations in a form comparable to that of Sastranagara's Wicara Keras. The history features the career of Rongga Panambangan I, the author's grandfather and trusted companion of Mangkunagara I. The poem focuses upon the ethics of Javanese statecraft, the duties of the virtuous courtier, and Javanese court etiquette.

Four pages added at the very end of the MS, also in the hand of Panambangan III, contain prose notes on Javanese chronology, on Surakartan dynastic genealogy, and on the birth dates of the Prophet Adam and the Sunans of Giri.

Script is in the distinctive cursive hand of Mas Ng. Rongga Panambangan III; compare with MN 184–186 and MN 222. Stanza and canto markers are illuminated in red ink.

Watermarks: "PROPATRIA"; "HK."

MS double-page numbered 1–35.

History. Java - 1550±–1705± -- Pajang, Mataram, Kartasura

A history of the Central Javanese kingdoms of Pajang, Mataram, and Kartasura (ca. 1550–1705). Macapat verse. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Ingsun amiwiti nulis, asekar Samaradana, pukul sadasa wanciné."

The history begins with the accession of Jaka Tingkir (Sultan Hadiwijaya) to the throne of Pajang (ca. 1550) and extends to the flight of Sunan Mas from Kartasura following Pakubuwana I's capture of the kraton (ca. 1705).

MS was inscribed in Yogyakarta by a "pitiful young man" (wong anom kawelas arsa) who dates his copy 30 Dulkangidah Alip 1811 (13 October 1882).

The first two pages and the stanza and canto markers of the MS are illuminated with gold-leaf and colored inks.

MS has been transliterated (MN 240 TT).

History. Java - 1500±–1830 -- Demak–Yogyakarta
History. Java, Karaton Yogyakarta - 1846–1855

A history of Central Java (early sixteenth century to 1830). Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Ruming gondakusuma sinami." Poem (version?) commissioned (composed?) by K.R.A Danureja V, Pepatih-dalem Karaton Ngayogyakarta (= Radèn Gondakusuma).

Opening with an genealogical history of the Islamic prophets, the poem continues with a history of the Central Javanese kingdoms of Demak, Pajang, Mataram, Ngayogyakarta, and Surakarta. The history extends through the end of the Dipanagara War (1830). At poem's close are brief notes commemorating Danureja V's installation as Pepatih-dalem in AJ 1775 (1846/7) and the death of Hamengkubuwana V in AJ 1783 (1855).

History. Java - Pustaka Raja

A history of Javanese traditions. Prose. Collection of prose notes on traditional customs, ritual practices, offerings, performing arts (dance, gamelan, wayang), etc. The text is provided with an introduction in which the author acknowledges Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Purwa as the primary source of his history. Deploring the encroachment of European culture in his contemporary Java, he explains that he writes this text in order to remind Javanese youth of their own cultural heritage.

History. Java - 0000–1570± -- Creation–Pajang

A history of Java in macapat verse, beginning with the creation of the universe and extending through the execution of Radèn Pabèlan at the court of Pajang. The poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Kadya madu purwanira tulis." The second verse begins: "Dyan awarna rupa araning, alam arwah lan roh ilafika."

Tracing the genealogy of Javanese kingship, the poem opens with a history of the Prophet Adam. The text then proceeds through the generations of Adam's left-hand descendants (i.e., the Hindu gods and heroes), accounts of the ancient and legendary kings of Java (including the histories of Mendhang-kamulan, Jenggala, and Majapahit), and histories of Demak and Pajang. The text breaks off abruptly mid-line.

Composed: [s.l., s.a.]
Inscribed: Surakarta, mid-19th c.
477 pp.; 35.5 x 23 cm.
History. Java - 1590±–1677

A history of Mataram (ca. 1590–1677): Panembahan Sénapati to Sri Susuhunan Ngalaga (Pangéran Puger). Macapat verse. Volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Ri sampuning mangkana wadya lit, pinangarah asamya akarya, bata byang myang bata putèh."

History begins with Sénapati's erection of a walled fortress around his kraton, and continues through the reigns of his descendants: Panembahan Séda Krapyak, Sultan Agung, and Amangkurat I. During Amangkurat I's reign, the kraton of Plérèd falls to the Madurese rebel, Trunajaya (1677). Amangkurat I flees westward and dies a refugee in Banyumas. Amangkurat's second son, Pangéran Puger, retakes the Mataram kraton where he reigns as Sunan Ngalaga. Famine and disease devastate the kraton. Cf. MN 198.

Appended to the bottom of pp. 476–77 is a chronological listing of important events chronicled in this history.

a. Serat Suluk Aspiya (MS pp. 1–73). A history of Pakubuwana IV's quest for mystical knowledge. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Rarasing tyas lir niyat mamanis, dénirarsa murwèng srining raras, masalah ing rahsa reké." The text culminates in the mystical teachings of the martyr Kyai Sayang. The kyai delivered these teachings from the funeral pyre upon which he was burned alive in punishment for insolence to his would-be student, Pakubuwana IV. Attribution of authorship from a sandiasma in the poem's opening stanza.)

b. Serat Wasita Mulya (MS pp. 73–140). Javano-Islamic mystical teachings in macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Boten saking dora ing pambudi, insa Allah sangking énget amba." Teachings of the author's grandfather (éyang), Bendara Kangjeng Pangéran Kusumadilaga Tinjamaya, just prior to his death. Kusumadilaga, a renowned dhalang and literatus, was the son of K.P.H. Mangkubumi I and the grandson of Pakubuwana III. A significant portion of the teachings are in the form of wayang similes.

Keris. History.

A history of ancient and medieval Java in macapat verse. Ninety-three cantos. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Asmarandana ginupit, Sukra Kliwon arinira." MS is a witness of the "Galuh variant" of the Babad Tanah Jawi historiographic tradition.

The text treats the histories of Galuh, Pajajaran, Majapahit, Pengging, and Demak. History opens with extensive treatment of the reign of the legendary Prabu Banjaransari, king of Galuh; the narrative continues up to and including the exile of Jaka Tingkir from the court of Demak. There are lengthy passages on famous keris and keris smiths (see, for example, MS I: 205–26 and MS II: 1 ff.). The poem also treats the beginnings of the Islamic conversion in 15th-century Java, featuring lengthy discourses on issues in Javano-Islamic theology (see, for example, MS II: 45 ff.).

The dating of this rendition, or copy, is problematic. The MS is dated both Sukra Kliwon (sic), 18 Jumadilawal Bé 1816 (i.e., Setu Legi, 12 February 1887); sangkala: "rasaning [6] rat [1] salira [8] tunggal [1]" and "10 Pèbruari 1897; sangkala: "sapda [7] trus [9] murtining [8] aji [1]."

History. Europe - 1815 -- Napoleon

History of the European Napoleonic wars in the year 1815: from Napoleon's escape from Elba to his imprisonment on St. Helena. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Kawuryaning pustaka rinawi, saking sabrang nagari Néderlan." The history is a macapat rendering of an earlier Javanese translation from a Dutch text. According to the introductory verses of the text, the original translation (MN 273) had been produced by C. F. Winter for his "dear friend" (mitranira), Mangkunagara III. This macapat version, apparently written by Mangkunagara IV in consultation with R.Ng. The composition was undertaken upon the advice of "A. pandher Sahis," Inspector of Education for Java. Cf. MN 274.

This MS, which is apparently the author's working draft, is inscribed in two hands: a) a cursive Surakarta script (C. F. Winter?) and b) a small Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn script (probably the hand of R.Ng. Ronggawarsita).

History. Islam - Prophets -- Creation to Husèn

Sacred history of Islam: history of the prophets from the Creation to the adventures of Bagindha Husèn. Macapat verse. History opens in Asmarandana: "Ingsun amimiti amuji, anebut nama hywang Sukema, kang murah ing donya mangko." Note the highly irregular spelling of this MS.

MS is dated twice. On MS I: 1 is the partial date: Rebo [Legi] 28 Sapar Dal, Mongsa III, no year or sangkala (26 August 1862?). Again on MS I: 225 is the date Siyam 1866 [A.D.?]. Inscribed below this date on the same page is the date July 1872.

The MS was inscribed in Kampung Ngamongsari, Surabaya in two hands: a) MS I: 1–109b and MS II: 1–229 by "Ali, Amongsari-Surabaya" and b) MS I: 111a–225a by "mantuné Tumenggung Jimat, Amongsari-Surabaya."

On MS I: 110b, is inscribed the name "Raden Soerapandojo, Makoenegaran, Soerakarta (Tipes)." There is a note on MS II: 238, indicating that the MS belonged to a certain Mas Pandayawinata of Kampung Pabéyan in Surabaya. The note specifies that Pandayawinata, formerly of Surakarta, was a vendor of herbal medicines and fragrant oils and powders.

MS was purchased from Mr. E. Mody in 1944 (see MS p. ii).

MS II: stanza and canto markers illuminated in colored inks.

History. Islam - Prophets -- Creation-Mohammad

Sacred history of Islam: history of the prophets from the Creation to the death of the Prophet Mohammad. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Ingsun amimiti muji." Pégon.

The Javanese script colophon (MS p. i) states that this history is derived (translated) from the Qur'an and furthermore asserts that whosoever reads the text in its entirety will be blessed by all the prophets—just as though s/he had performed the haj. The colophon is dated AJ 1770 (1842/3); sangkala: "sirna [0] sapta [1] swarèng [7] jalma [1]." The colophon reads: "Puniku serat Ambiya asal Kur'an dipun-tegesi amrih wuninga tegesipun Kur'an cacahipun satus bab, sapa ingkang maos katam angsal supangat para nabi sadaya saha minongka unjung ing Baitollah, sinengkalan taunira sirna sapata swaraning jalma." A colophon at volume's end (MS p. 332) dates the text Hijrah 1213 (1798/9). The colophon reads: "Tamat layang Ambiya nuju taun Hijrah Jimya'ro'ghoim sanah 1213."

Serat Sultan Ibrahim
Author: Winter, C. F. (1799–1859)
Composed: Surakarta, 1844
Inscribed: Surakarta, 1849
i, 61 pp.; 35.2 x 21.8 cm.
Islamic romance. Sultan Ibrahim
The tale of Sultan Ibrahim Ibnu Ad'ham of Ngérak [Irak]. Macapat verse: ten cantos. The poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Wonten kondha rinenggèng ngartati, witaning wasita saking Arab." Poem is translated from the Malay (Hikayat Sultan Ibrahim) by the philologist-translator, C. F. Winter. Pigeaud suggests that this "rather insipid" tale was promoted by the Dutch authorities as "wholesome, and morally uplifting reading-matter for the Javanese public" (Literature of Java, vol. I, p. 224). The text, however unpopular, was thrice published (1881, 1882, and 1908). For synopses of cantos of the published editions, see Pratélan I, pp. 488–90.
The poem is dated 20 Jumadilakir Éhé 1772 (6 July 1844); sangkala: "paksa [2] swara [7] pandhita [7] tunggal [1]."
This MS copy was presented by the author to his friend R.M. Mayor Gondakusuma (the future Mangkunagara IV) on 2 Rabingulawal Wawu 1777 (23 June 1849); sangkala: "sapta [7] pandhita [7] swara [7] tunggal [1]."

Religion. Kejawèn - Mysticism

Prose compendium of the teachings of Sèh Kajat Jati. The teachings concern matters of Javano-Islamic mystical theory and practice. Of special concern are speculations on the nature and attributes of the human body/soul. Sèh Kajat Jati (known as Empu Kajat Jati prior to his conversion to Islam) is said to have been an ascetic adept who lived at the time that Pajajaran ruled Java, i.e., in the thirteenth c. (by 19th-c. Surakartan chronologies). After his conversion to Islam, the text explains, Kajat Jati became a student of the renowned Sufi scholar, Malana Kajali (i.e., al-Ghazali [1058–1111]).

The MS is signed by Kyai Ageng Muhkamad Sirullah, Kedhung Kol, Surakarta and is dated 22 Dulkangidah Alip 1819 (10 July 1890).

Author: Anonymous
Compiled: [Yogyakarta ?], 1837
Inscribed: [Yogyakarta ?], 1837
57, 2: illuminations; 31.5 x 20.2 cm.
Compilation

Compilation of eight texts, most of which compose writings that concern Javano-Islamic religious beliefs and practices. Likely inscribed by or for a woman, the MS opens with a text that explicitly addresses issues of child rearing.

The date of inscription, on the severely damaged initial page of the MS, is partially obscured. MS dated Akad Kliwon, 22 Sawal Éhé, windu Sancaya, wuku Watugunung, mongsa pitu 17[64] (29 January 1837); only the final portion of the sangkala is legible: "swa [7] tunggal [1]."

A small quadratic script of probable Yogyakarta provenance: note the punctuation marks designating cantos. The MS punctuation is illuminated in red ink.

Watermarks: "VAN GELDER"; "PROPATRIA."

Didactic literature. Women

Moralistic-didactic text in macapat verse (two cantos). The poem opens in Asmarandana metre; beginning of MS severely damaged. From the extant portion of the opening stanzas, the copy?/composition? date can be determined as 29 January 1837 (see 317.0 above). The poem is a text on practical ethics, ritual practices (including prayer/mantric texts, and guidelines pertaining to ascetic discipline), and child-rearing practices. Text includes stories of the saints Sunan Giri and Sunan Kalijaga. The poem's second canto, in Juru Demung, is a treatise on the weaning of nursing infants, with commentary on the dangers of late weaning and the virtues of a more timely weaning.

73, 9 (loose) pp.; 34 x 21.5 cm.
Religion. Islam - Tasawwuf -- Wirid

Prose compendium on matters pertaining to Javano-Islamic mystical theory and practice. The text is very similar in form, style, and contents to the often published Wirid Hidayat Jati text attributed to Ronggawarsita. See Simuh, Mistik Islam Kejawen Raden Ngabehi Ranggawarsita: Suatu Studi terhadap Serat Wirid Hidayat Jati (Jakarta: Penerbit Universitas Indonesia, 1988).

Determination of MS authorship is problematic. On MS p. 3 authorship is attributed to Kyai Ageng Mukhamad Sirullah of Kedhung Kol, Surakarta. And yet on the same page, the sangkala for the date of composition (rong [9] sogata [7] warga [7] sinuta [1]) writes, in sandiasma, the name "Ronggawarsita." The pujongga Ronggawarsita also resided in Kedhung Kol, Surakarta. Perhaps Muhkamad Sirullah was Ronggawarsita's pupil; or perhaps the present MS is a copy of a Muhkamad Sirullah copy of a Ronggawarsita original. See also MN 312.

The present MS witness is dated 1 Sawal Dal 1871 (14 November 1939); sangkala: "sang [1] pandhita [7] ngèsthi [8] tunggal [1]."

Cursive Surakarta script.

MS leaves numbered 1–74; no p. #55. Note: 3 loose pages added to p. 7; one loose page added to p. 30; one loose page added to p. 39; four loose pages added to p. 49.

Religion. Islam - Tasawwuf -- Suluk
The teachings of the Javanese (!) saint Sèh Samsu Tabariz to the Mulana of Rum. Macapat verse: Gambuh metre. The suluk composes a Javanese reading of the relationship between Shamsuddîn Tabrîzî (d. 1248) and the renowned Maulânâ Jalâluddîn Rûmî (d. 1273). In the Javanese suluk, Samsu Tabariz, taking the form of a naked child, comes to Mecca where he reveals to the collected scholars the Truth of mystical Unity. This suluk is often found in Ronggasasmita's Suluk Acih.

Cabolang: cantos 1–87. Wandering student romance with encyclopedic passages on traditional Javanese lore and on Javano-Islamic mysticism and theology. Macapat verse. The adventures of the wandering prince of Giri, Jayèngresmi (Sèh Amongraga), and Ki Mas Cabolang, set in early seventeenth-century Java. Poem opens in Kinanthi: "Sri Narpatmaja sudibya, talatah ing nungswa Jawi, Surakarta Hadiningrat, agnya ringkang wadu carik, Sutrasna kang kinanthi, mangun rèh carita dangu, sanggyaning kawruh Jawa, ingimpun tinrap kakawin, mrih tan kemba karya dhangan kang miyarsa."

The poem was commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta (the future Pakubuwana V) on Sabtu Pahing, 26 Mukharam Jé 1742 (8 January 1815); sangkala: "paksa [2] suci [4] sabda [7] ji [1]." According to internal evidence, the recipient of the commission was the Kadipatèn court poet, Ki Ng. Ronggasutrasna. According to convention, Ronggasutrasna was assisted by R.T. Sastranagara (R. Ng. Yasadipura II) and Sastradipura (Kyai Haji Muhammad Ilhar). See, for example, Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini," Verhandelingen van het Koninklijk Bataviaas Genootschap 72 (2), 1933. Kamajaya (H. Karkono), however, in the preface of his new edition of the Cabolang -Centhini, claims that Ronggasutrasna alone wrote the Cabolang portion of the text (cantos 1–321); see Serat Centhini (Suluk Tambangraras), jilid I, ed. Kamajaya (Yogyakarta: Yayasan Centhini, 1985), pp. iii–v.

The present MS comprises cantos 1–87 of the complete text. Volume begins with the arrival of Sèh Wali Lanang in Java and continues though the fall of Giri and the flight of Jayèngresmi up to his adoption by Sèh Akadiyat of Sokayasa (Cabolang's father). For synopses of cantos see Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini" or Sumahatmaka, Ringkasan Centini (Suluk Tambanglaras) (Jakarta: PN Balai Pustaka, 1981).

"Major Centhini": cantos 1–45.
Wandering student romance with encyclopedic passages on traditional Javanese lore and on Javano-Islamic mysticism and theology. Macapat verse. The adventures of the wandering princes of Giri, especially Jayèngresmi (Sèh Amongraga), set in early seventeenth-century Java. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Raras rumé dénya memanisi, ngalap kawruh, béla kang linimpat."

The poem is a continuation of the Serat Cabolang, which was commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta (the future Pakubuwana V) on Sabtu Pahing, 26 Mukharam Jé 1742 (8 January 1815); sangkala: "paksa [2] suci [4] sabda [7] ji [1]" (see MN 324 Series). Poem was composed by three Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn court poets; see above. See also Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini," Verhandelingen van het Koninklijk Bataviaas Genootschap 72 (2), 1933 and Serat Centhini (Suluk Tambangraras), jilid I, ed. Kamajaya (Yogyakarta: Yayasan Centhini, 1985), pp. iii–v.

This volume corresponds to cantos 1–45 of the 1847 "Major Centhini" (published Batavia, 1912–1915). For synopses of cantos, see Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini," Pratélan II, pp. 322–28 or Sumahatmaka, Ringkasan Centini (vol. V: canto 1 to vol. VI: canto 1).

Citrasantana signs his name, in sandiasma, in the opening two stanzas of the poem: "Radèn Ngabéhi Citrasantana, Abdi-dalem Mantri Guru Mangkunagaran." He dates the beginning of his copy 14 Sapar Dal 1839 and 7 March 1909.

Cabolang: cantos 88–174. Wandering student romance with encyclopedic passages on traditional Javanese lore and on Javano-Islamic mysticism and theology. Macapat verse. The adventures of the wandering prince of Giri, Jayèngresmi (Sèh Amongraga), and Ki Mas Cabolang set in early seventeenth-century Java.

The poem was commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta (the future Pakubuwana V) on Sabtu Pahing, 26 Mukharam Jé 1742 (8 January 1815); sangkala: "paksa [2] suci [4] sabda [7] ji [1]" (see MN 324). According to internal evidence, the recipient of the commission was the Kadipatèn court poet, Ki Ng. Ronggasutrasna. According to convention, Ronggasutrasna was assisted by R.T. Sastranagara (R. Ng. Yasadipura II) and Sastradipura (Kyai Haji Muhammad Ilhar). See, for example, Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini," Verhandelingen van het Koninklijk Bataviaas Genootschap 72 (2), 1933. Kamajaya (H. Karkono), however, in the preface of his new edition of the Cabolang -Centhini, claims that Ronggasutrasna alone wrote the Cabolang portion of the text (cantos 1–321); see Serat Centhini (Suluk Tambangraras), jilid I, ed. Kamajaya (Yogyakarta: Yayasan Centhini, 1985), pp. iii–v.

This MS comprises cantos 88–174 of the complete text. At volume's close is a ten-page table of contents with synopses of cantos. See also Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjenthini" or Sumahatmaka, Ringkasan Centini, vol. II.

"Major Centhini": cantos 1–37.

Wandering student romance with encyclopedic passages on traditional Javanese lore and on Javano-Islamic mysticism and theology. Macapat verse. The adventures of the wandering princes of Giri, especially Jayèngresmi (Sèh Amongraga), set in early seventeenth-century Java. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Purwaning rèh manising palupi, Respatyènjang nuju gathitastha, Ruwah ping tigalikuré, ing Dal mongsa kasèku." Version is dated 23 Ruwah Dal 1775 (5 August 1847); sangkala: "atata [5] resi [7] apan amulang [7] jalma [1]."

The poem is a continuation of the Cabolang, a text commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta (the future Pakubuwana V) on Sabtu Pahing, 26 Mukharam Jé 1742 (8 January 1815); sangkala: "paksa [2] suci [4] sabda [7] ji [1]." Poem was composed by three Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn court poets; see authors' names above. Cabolang: cantos 320–321. A fragment from the Cabolang wandering student romance, a portion of the Centhini-Cabolang focusing on the adventures of Ki Mas Cabolang, son of Sèh Akadiyat. The macapat verse text is set in early seventeenth-century Java. The complete text was commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta in January 1815, and was written by the Kadipatèn court poet Ki Ngabéhi Ronggasutrasna (likely with the assistance of others); see MN 324, 333.

This fragment is from cantos 320–321 of the Cabolang. Relating the adventures of Ki Mas Cabolang in Wirasaba, it includes a passage on calendrical divination associated with the cleaning of keris. See Pigeaud, "De Serat Tjabolang en de Serat Tjentini," p. 37.

Javano-Islamic mystic song in macapat verse: four cantos. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Kalinyamat gènira anulis, ri Salasa Pahing ingkang tompa." The initial verses form a scribal introduction, dating the writing of the text and instructing readers how to read it. The poem composes a heterodox Sufi text antagonistic to orthodox legalistic Islam. Mentioned as a source of the text is the Kitab Bahrulkalbi. The present version of the Gatholoco is not identical to the text edited and translated by van Akkeren in his Een Gedrocht en toch de Volmaakte Mens (The Hague: Excelsior, 1951). Composed: [s.l., circa 1860–80]
Inscribed: Surakarta, 1890
67 pp.; 20.5 x 16.5 cm.
Religion. Islam - Tasawwuf -- Suluk
Javano-Islamic mystic song in macapat verse: five cantos. Poem opens in Mijil: "Kang pustaka pinurwèng pamijil, pethikan sajatos, saking kitab nenggih pinangkané, kang anama Kitab Bahrulkalbi." The poem composes a heterodox Sufi text antagonistic to orthodox legalistic Islam. Kitab Bahrulkalbi is cited as the source text (cf. MN 357A.1). The present version, which parallels MN 357C.1, differs both from MN 357A.1 and to the text edited and translated by van Akkeren in his Een Gedrocht en toch de Volmaakte Mens (The Hague, 1951).
MS is dated "Respati, 3 Mart 1890."
Text is inscribed on unlined European paper in a cursive Surakarta script which was prevalent among Mangkunagaran writers of the late nineteenth century.
Many MS leaves are torn.
Note: Reksa Pustaka A 139b (Tedhakan Serat Gatholoco Babon saking Mangkunagaran) is a recent copy of A 139a and was not filmed.

Wayang. Lore

Javano-Islamic mystic song in macapat verse: ten cantos. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Mangun sabda binarung ing gendhing." Poem records the teachings of Sèh Ngabdul Salam to his numerous sons (including R. Sasrawardaya). The poem includes passages that are composed with imagery drawn from the Javanese performing arts (gamelan, wayang, and dance); see especially MS p. 99 ff. Toward the end of the text is a remarkable interpretation of the Pandhawa (Mahabharata) story—rendered in Sufi terminology.

Poem's opening canto forms the copyist's introduction.

Didactic literature. Statecraft
Didactic-moralistic text in Kawi language and macapat verse. The poem, in Dhangdhanggula, opens: "Awignam. Sarasa sinilem ing jaladri, bahning mahastra condra sangkala." The poem instructs the Javanese ruling class in matters of correct behavior, statecraft, kingship, and warfare. Authorship of the poem is usually attributed to Pangéran Karang-Gayam (= Pangéran Sujanapura), Pujongga Karaton Pajang.

The composition is dated by a condrasangkala in the poem's opening verse. This sangkala may be (and has been) variously read: "bahni [3] maha [1] [a]stra [5] condra [1]" (1513 Saka [1591]) and "jaladri [4] bahni [3] mahastra [5] condra [1]" (1534 Saka [1612]). See also Poerbatjaraka, Kapustakan Djawi, pp. 102–05. In this exemplar there is another possible sangkala: "widdha [7] pandhita [7] wreksa [6] cendhana [1?]" (AJ 1677 = AD 1751–52).

Didactic literature. Ethics

Lessons in immorality given by Jajal Lanat, king of the evil spirits, to his children and followers. Two versions in macapat verse. The first version (MS pp. 1–62) opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Kang srengkara, pinurwèng sastradi, awit ingkang asma sang pandhita, Jajil Lanat sang kinaot." This version is dated Slasa, 4 Dulkijah Jé (see MS p. 2); I was unable, however, to decipher the sangkala which was written in "devils' language": "sengkalanya nyang taun, mingsih pakik basa ijajil, singkok nèt ken ciarang, itu jugak urut, mingsih pakik later durga, cobak liyat rupanya dhibawah ini, bukan terlalu éram." This so-called language of fiends (basa ijajil) appears to be Chinese, and it is described in Malay. The devil's lessons include instructions on usury for salaried employees of the Dutch [colonial government], on whoring, on opium smoking, and on hypocritical piety.

This version of the poem is inscribed in (Yogyakarta?) cursive script in violet ink.

Following the first inscription of the text are notes in Dutch establishing authorship. These notes state that the poem's author, Radèn Riya Ranadiningrat (a great grandson of Hamengkubuwana II), was still alive in Yogyakarta at the time the notes were written (November 1892). Note also marginal notes in Dutch which comment, at times cynically, on the text.

The second version of the poem (MS pp. 66–99) opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Lir srengkara surasèng sastradi, awit ingkang asma sang pandhita, Jajal Lanat sang kinaot." On MS p. 99 the scribe, Atmawiryana, "Abdi-dalem santona ing Kabupatèn Magelang," explains that he has inscribed the text from memory. He identifies the author, R.R. Ranadiningrat, as an Abdi-dalem Bupati Anom in the Karaton Yogyakarta.

Compilation

Compilation of five texts. The texts comprise the Old Javanese compositions, Niti Sruti and Arjuna Wiwaha, with Modern Javanese translations and Kawi-Javanese glossaries.

The MS opens with two "letters": 1) from Wanèngpur[wa] to his uncle, "Radèn Ngabéhi Hawikrama" requesting two texts (probably this Niti Sruti and Arjuna Wiwaha) and 2) a note signed by Hawikrama on the authorship of the Niti Sruti and on the inscription of this copy. Hawikrama claims that the poem's author was Pangéran Karang-Gayam, Pujongga of Pajang, and that the poem was composed in Saka 1513 (1591) upon commission of the king (Hadiwijaya, Sultan Pajang). Hawikrama's note seems to indicate that the inscription of this copy was begun on "ari Buddha, wimbaning sasangka, purnama saddha, jroning sasi Asura, saking taun Wawu windu Sancaya. . ." (March 1872?), and that the scribe was a certain "Raryya Dhadhap-tulis." The word dhadhap in a name usually indicates a pseudonymn. The handwriting of this MS appears to be that of the pujongga R. Ng. Ronggawarsita.

Kawi language in macapat verse, with translation and explication in modern literary prose. Inscribed in three columns: left: Kawi; center (in red ink) word-for-word translation into Modern Javanese; right: explication in Modern Javanese.

Authorship of the original poem is attributed to Pangéran Karang-Gayam (a.k.a. Pangéran Sujanapura), Pujongga Karaton Pajang. Translation and explication by R. Ng. Ronggawarsita, Pujongga Karaton Surakarta. Ronggawarsita's prose explication of the Niti Sruti was published in Surakarta in 1871. The Kawi poem is dated by a candrasangkala in the poem's opening verse. This sangkala may be (and has been) variously read: "bahni[3] maha [1] [a]stra [5] condra [1]" (1513 Saka [1591]), or "jaladri [4] bahni [3] mahastra [5] condra [1]" (1534 Saka [1612]). A fragment from Empu Kanwa's kekawin classic Arjuna Wiwaha (Marriage of Arjuna). The poem treats the struggle of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna (the champion of the gods) with the demon-king Niwathakawaca. This fragment excerpts the episode of Arjuna's temptation by the heavenly nymphs.

The original kekawin was composed in the early 11th c. by Empu Kanwa in the East Javanese kingdom of Kahuripan (during the reign of Érlangga). For an exhaustive study of the Arjuna Wiwaha literary traditions, see I. Kuntara Wiryamartana, Arjunawiwâha (Yogyakarta: Duta Wacana University Press, 1990).

MS II: pp. 1–65; 20.7 x 16.3
Religion. Islam - Tasawwuf -- Suluk Wayang. Stories - Déwaruci Classical literary tales. Déwaruci

Adapted from Yasadipura's well-known rendition of the Déwaruci tale, the poem treats Pandhawa prince Wrekudara's quest for the "Water of Life" through his meeting with the dwarf divinity Déwaruci, who reveals to him the true inner meaning of life. Macapat verse.

The poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Raras ingkang sekar sarkara mrik, amarsudi tuladan utama, dèn-jalimat pangincangé, pan kathah serat suluk, jinarwaken raosing ngèlmi, Surti, tuwin Wiwaha, ya Bomatakèku, winawang surasanira, Jayabaya Rama Babat sadayèki, ya pinethik sadaya." Note the claim here that this poem is adapted from a host of "traditional" texts, including various suluk, Niti Sruti, Arjuna Wiwaha, Bomantaka, Jayabaya, Serat Rama and "all the Babad." The Déwaruci text begins on MS II, p. 3.

Note also the sandi-asma for R. Panji Suryawijaya in this stanza. R. Panji Suryawijaya, originally from Surakarta, resided for years in Batavia where he served as personal secretary to the Dutch philologist A. B. Cohen-Stuart (d. 1876). For more on Suryawijaya, see Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, p. 262.

MS was inscribed by a certain Radyan Mas Samasinama [pseudonymn for R.M. Koesoema?] in Kampung Kebon Kalipa [?], Batavia. This copy, which is dated 13 Siyam Dal 1799 (6 December 1870), was copied from a prototype MS dated Rejeb Wawu 1785 (March 1857).

Text is followed by four pages of miscellaneous pencilled notes. These notes are bound into the volume upside-down.

Text opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Kang pinurwèng gendhing, duk sinerat ing wanci rolas." The opening portion of the poem composes a version of Serat Wulang-dalem, a text attributed here and elsewhere to Pakubuwana IV. This version of Wulang-dalem is dated Soma Manis, Kurantil, Mongsa Kalima, Jé 1750 (21 October 1822?), some two years after Pakubuwana IV's death. See also Poerbatjaraka, Kapustakan Djawi, p. 154.

The poem also draws from Serat Niti Baya by Panembahan Ageng Panaraga (see MS III: p. 54). Niti Baya is usually dated 1820 (see MN 304.11).

Didactic literature. Etiquette

Humorous didactic text in macapat verse. Poem opens with an exemplary tale describing the unfortunate journey to court of a foolish nouveaux riche would-be courtier from the countryside. Teachings pertain especially to court etiquette and dress. The latter portion of the poem prescribes etiquette for ceremonies (i.e., weddings), with variant prescriptions for the courtly elite and commoners.

Poem is dated Tumpak Kulawu Mukharam Alip 1747 (23 October 1819); sangkala: "ramé [7] dadèken [4] unining [7] Alip [1]."

Framed by, and intertwined with, a sometimes esoteric didactic-moralistic discourse, the text composes a narrative of events from the wayang purwa Pandhawa cycle. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Manis sasmitaning satriyadi, kang pinaring nugrahaning Suksma." Concerning a Gembring Baring manuscript in the Leiden University Library (LOr 6517.2), Pigeaud notes that according to the literatus P. Sasraningrat of the Pakualaman, the author of the text was R.T. Prawiradireja of Madiun when it was still a dependency of Yogya (Literature of Java, vol. II, p. 387).

A transliterated Serat Gembring Baring (possibly a transliteration of this very MS) was published in 1981 (Jakarta: Departemen Pendidikan dan Kebudayaan Proyek Penerbitan Buku Sastra Indonesia dan Daerah, 1981).

MS is inscribed in two different cursive hands (MS I: pp. 1–63 and MS II: pp. 1–267), both in styles popular in Surakarta around the turn of the twentieth century.

Didactic literature. Women

Didactic text addressed to women. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Sinom: "Kang agnya gita sri nata, ing Surakarta nagari, Pakubuwana ping sanga." Taking the wives of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna as exemplars of virtue, the poem instructs women in the duties and responsibilities of wifehood in the context of polygynous marriage. For synopses of this very well-known poem's cantos, see Pratélan II, p. 72.

The poem was commissioned by Pakubuwana IX on 7 Jumadilakir 1792 (19 November 1863); sangkala: "miyarsakna [2] trus [9] ingkang sabda [7] naréndra [1]."

History. Java - Lambang

Text composes a single-stanza enigmatic poem, Uran-uran Semut Ireng, attributed to Rongga Janur of Kartasura, along with its interpretation by the Karaton Surakarta pujongga, R.T. Sastranagara (R. Ng. Yasadipura II). Sastranagara reads the poem as a trope on events in Javanese history from the fourteenth through the eighteenth centuries: kingdoms of Majapahit, Demak, Pajang, Mataram, and Kartasura. Notes appended to the interpretation include a chronology of the troped events.

The original poem is said to have been composed during the reign of Pakubuwana II in Kartasura; the interpretation, during the reign of Pakubuwana IV.

History of the magical flower, Sekar Wijyakusuma, which is fetched from an island off the southern coast of Java (near Cilacap) upon the accession of a new king to the throne of the Karaton Surakarta. The first part of the text, comprises the teachings of Kangjeng Ratu Kidul, spirit queen of the South Sea, to Panembahan Sénapati, founder of the Mataram dynasty. The spirit queen relates to her human lover the history of the flower and its connection with Javanese kingship. The second portion of the text relates the story of Sultan Agung's acquisition of the flower.

History. Java - Jangka

Prophetic outline of Javanese history: notes on the progression of the eras (jaman), with Kiyamat Kubra, messianic expectations associated with the Day of Judgment. Prose. The prophecy is attributed to Prabu Aji Jayabaya, ninth-century [sic] ruler of Kadhiri, as revealed to him by the Turkish mullah, Pandhita Rum Sayid Maulana Ngali Samsujèn. Claimed as sources for this text are: Kitab Musarar, Jitabsara, and Jitisaka.

A note states that the transliterated MS was copied from a prototype MS from "Yasawarsitan." Text is, hence, apparently a typed transliteration of MN 409.1.

Court, Java. Archives - 0800s–1800s -- Land administration

Prose text pertaining to the administration of the royal courts of Central Java (especially the Karaton Surakarta), in two parts:.

a. Part one (MS pp. 101–38) provides explications of court titles and positions in ancient times (ing jaman kina) and in the nineteenth-century Karaton Surakarta.

b. Part two (MS pp. 139–226), based upon R. Ng. Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Wéddha, or Serat Babad Sangkala Ageng, is a discussion of Javanese land administration from the ninth-century [sic] reign of Prabu Jayabaya in Kedhiri to the accession of Pakubuwana VII to the throne of Surakarta in 1830. Among other things, the text discusses the Javanese units of population and land measure (cacah and lungguh) and reviews the duties of royal officials in court and countryside.

Religion. Kejawèn - Mysticism

A manual for the performance of the wayang "exorcism" ceremony known as the ruwatan. Play script for Lakon Murwakala, with introduction and interpretive analysis. The play script (MS pp. 7–41) includes texts of the exorcistic rapal (mantras). At the conclusion of the play script there follows (MS pp. 42–88) a lengthy discourse on the "true meaning" (suraos) of the ruwatan ritual. This discourse treats issues in Javanese mystical theory and practice, including discussions on the source of the ruwatan's power, on the nature of man, and on the attainment of human perfection (with diagrams and numerological speculations).

The MS is dated 12 November 1949. The text draws on two sources: 1) Pakem Murwakala, from a ruwatan actually performed by the renowned Mangkunagaran dhalang, Ki Rongga Wignyasutarna on 1 Sura Wawu 1881 (24 October 1949) to exorcise the realm; and 2) textual sources from the Reksa Pustaka library.

Compilation
Compilation of seven texts, including several wayang pakem. The volume provides prose epitomes of 116 wayang lakon from the purwa repertoire and one wayang lakon from the Gedhog repertoire. Also included is a fragment of the Serat Tajusalatin.
Note on MS p. vi the cipher dates 1745 (1817/8) and 1766 (1838/9). Item 2 is dated 1818–19; item 4 appears to be dated 1814.
The volume, or at least part of the volume, at one time evidently belonged to the Suryadipuran household (see MS p. 1 verso: "kagungan-dalem lampahan ing Suryadipuran"). Perhaps the note refers to the household of P.H. Suryadipura, a son of Pakubuwana V. See also notes (MS p. iv) referring to Pangéran Panji Suryaningrat (putra-dalem Pakubuwana V, exiled to Menado) and to R. Ng. Cakradipura (the retainer who accompanied Pakubuwana VI into Ambonese exile in 1830). See also the signature "Kusumadiningrat" on MS p. 204 verso.
The volume is provided with several tables of contents: MS p. v (listing twenty-three wayang lakon), and on two loose pages inserted in the volume (listing 115 wayang lakon).
MS inscribed in various hands on dluwang (Ponorogo bark paper).
MS double-page numbered 1–270; page following p. 14 not numbered, no p.# 71, p.# 105 x 2. Two loose leaves are inserted in the volume.

Wayang. Pakem - Purwa

Prose epitomes of twenty-three wayang lakon from the purwa repertoire. The lakon were composed by the renowned Karaton Surakarta dhalang, Redilaksana (or Redileksana) upon orders of Pakubuwana IV.

MS is dated twice; interestingly, the later date precedes the earlier. A note at the beginning of the text identifies the author and his patron and gives 30 Jumadilawal Jimakir 1746 (27 March 1819) as the date of royal command, or commission, to compose the text. According to notes on MS p. 121, the copy was completed on 10 Sura Jimakir 1746 (9 November 1818); sangkala: "rasaning [6] toya [4] saptaning [7] ratu [1]."

Wayang. Pakem - Purwa

Prose epitomes of twenty-three lakon from the wayang purwa repertoire. Titles listed below. These epitomes were probably prepared by the renowned Karaton Surakarta dhalang Redilaksana upon commission of Pakubuwana IV (see MN 419.2).

This MS was copied from Kagungandalem Serat Pakem Ringgit (MN 419.2?). The copy was begun 1 Sapar Bé 1768 (4 April 1840) and completed 24 Rabingulawal Bé 1768 (26 May 1840); sangkala: "naga [8] obah [6] giri [7] jalma [1]."

The copy was made for (or perhaps by) "Kangjeng Bendara Radèn Mas Kapitan Ajidan Hariya Gondakusuma" (the future Mangkunagara IV).

Quadratic Surakarta script.

Watermarks: "T. SANDERS & ZOON"; "PROPATRIA."

MS leaves double-page numbered 1–112; no p.# 97.

The lakon are as follows:

1. Lampahan Sri Mapunggung (pp. 1–3).
2. Lampahan Bremana-Bremani (pp. 3–6).
3. Lampahan Kanumayasa (pp. 6–12).

Wayang. Stories - Versified plays -- Purwa

Part I of Sindusastra's four-part Parta Yagnya. Wayang purwa lakon Parta Krama (marriage of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna to Déwi Wara Sembadra) rendered in macapat verse. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Giyuhing tyas nawung brangti, mantri wredana Purbayan." The poem is dated Soma Manis, Julungpujut, 17 (sic) Rejeb Wawu 1761 (1 December 1833); sangkala: "bumi [1] ébah [6] gunging [7] rat [1]." Poem composed by the court poet, R. Ng. Sindusastra, a long-time member of Pakubuwana VII's retinue. The poem was published (Surakarta 1875) with an altered opening canto. For synopses of cantos of the published text, see Pratélan I, pp. 366–71. See also Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, pp. 255–56 and vol. II, pp. 30–31 (LOr 1807).

The present copy is dated (MS p. 388) 22 Ruwah Jimawal 1845 (9 July 1915). The scribe, Mangunsuwirya, has signed this copy backwards: "yawirsungunma."

Note signature (MS p. 1): "R.M. Ng. Hardjoroemeksa, Mantri Administrateur Modjogedang" and seal (MS p. i): "Opzichter-MN-Karanganjar."

Parts I and II of Sindusastra's four-part Parta Yagnya. Macapat verse. See Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, pp. 255–56 and vol. II, pp. 30–31 (LOr 1807). On MS I, p. i are notes prepared by the Reksa Pustaka staff comparing this MS witness with other Parta Krama and Srikandhi Maguru Manah MSS in the Mangkunagaran collection.

MS was apparently copied in Yogyakarta in 1899 from a Surakarta prototype MS dated 1863; see notes to MN 436.1 below.

The MS is inscribed in a cursive script of probable Yogyakarta provenance.

MS purchased from Ir. J. L. Moens.

Wayang purwa lakon Parta Krama (marriage of the Pandhawa prince Arjuna to Déwi Wara Sembadra) rendered in macapat verse. Poem opens in Asmarandana: "Asmarandana kinardi, bubuka wedharing cipta." This version differs from the well-known Sindusastra rendition. The "text proper" is both preceded and followed by lengthy apologies by the un-named author and/or scribe.

The MS is dated twice. Writing commenced on 18 Sapar Jimawal 1845 (6 January 1915); sangkala: "tata [5] milir [4] ngèsthi [8] tunggal [1]." Writing was completed on 12 Sapar Jé 1846 (20 December 1915); sangkala: "rasa [6] milet [4] anggèng [8] jalmi [1]."

Scribal style is consistent with styles in early twentieth-century Jogyakarta, and it is similar to one associated with the court of Pakubuwana X in Surakarta. The hand gradually changes over the course of the writing.

MS was purchased from J. L. Moens.

MS paper is embossed with the stamp: "PRIVE dalem."

MS leaves numbered 1–527; no p.# 366.

Author: Anonymous
Composed: [Surakarta, early 19th c.]

Classical literary tales. Bratayuda

Literary translation of the Old Javanese Kekawin Bharatayudha, a chronicle of the great war between the Pandhawa and Kurawa princes. The translation is rendered in Modern Javanese language and Kawi Miring (sekar ageng) metres.

The poem opens: "Yeksa tata swarèng rat, sangkala duk manitra, ri kanang mangutus jeng narèswaratmaja, lagunirèng kakawin, rikang basa jarwa, nyaritaken prangira, Pandhawa lan Kurawa, nenggih sira prabu ing Kadhiri jumeneng, Jayabaya nerpati, ing nguni kang yasa."

The original kekawin was composed by Empu Sedhah and Empu Panuluh for their royal patron, King Jayabaya of Kedhiri; composition of the text began in AD 1157. On the kekawin, see Zoetmulder, Kalangwan, pp. 256–63 and 269–83. This Modern Javanese rendering of the text in archaized kawi miring metres was commissioned by the "son of the king" (narèswaratma), presumably of Surakarta. The patron was, then, the future Pakubuwana V (r. 1820–23), and the commission was probably in the early years of the nineteenth century. The present MS is dated AJ 1755 (1827/8) by the sangkala: "yeksa [5] tata [5] swarèng [7] rat [1]."

It should be noted that the conclusion of this early nineteenth-century version diverges significantly from the kekawin original. Perhaps inscribing the desires of the Surakarta crown prince, whose rivalry with his long-reigning father Pakubuwana IV are well known, the final stanzas of this version write of King Jayabaya's transfer of authority to his son. The old king upon whose commission the poem had been composed retires to meditative practice and to caring for his women; his son assumes rule over the realm (see MS pp. 460–61).

Islamic romance. Wandering santri - Jayalengkara

Didactic literature. Statecraft

Religion. Kejawèn

The ancient Jayalengkara Wulang tale rendered in kawi miring metres and modern literary Javanese. Adventures of the wandering princes of Sunyawibawa in search of secular and religious knowledge. The text includes lengthy passages on statecraft and on the duties of kingship. The text opens: "Awignamastu namasiddhi. Purwaning rèh, ri ulun lumaksana ag[nya]nta sang, naréswaratmèng Jawi Kangjeng Pangran Adipati Taruna, Amangkunagara rikang jujuluk. Sudibya Rajaputra Ngaksigonda, sadaleming prajadi Surakarta, raja sinatriyambek maharjèng rat, singlar saking pakarti duskartèng ngrat. . ."

Poerbatjaraka suggests that the tale originated in Palembang (Indonesische Handschriften, pp. 17–25). The present version of the poem was commissioned by the crown prince of Surakarta (the future Pakubuwana V, r. 1820–23). The poem is composed in the style of the Karaton Surakarta pujongga R. Ng. Yasadipura II; the hand, too, appears to belong to Yasadipura II. Compare the hand of this MS with Yasadipura II autographs (MN 361, MN 479) .

The MS/version was begun on 14 Rabingulakir Dal 1735 (9 June 1808), sangkala: "tata [5] lir [3] gora [7] rupa [1]" and completed on 27 Saban, apparently of the same year (18 October 1808). There is, however, an apparent sangkala at poem's end that would suggest a rather earlier date of composition, perhaps by the elder Yasadipura. The apparent sangkala is: "sudira [1] tan [0] darakèng [7?; 6?] rat [1]" (AJ 1701 = AD 1775/6; AJ 1601 = AD 1678/9). This apparent sangkala could also refer to a prototype text upon which this kawi miring version is based.

At one time MS belonged to the Surakarta Kapatihan. See note on MS p. i: "Serat kagungan-dalem ing Kapatiyan kang mandhirèng ing Su[ra]karta Adiningrat."

History . Java - 0140– -- Sri Makukuhan

Prophetic and messianic history of Java, composed in cyclic form from a variety of sources. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Memanisé sarkara kaèsthi, mamèngeti dénira manulat, ari Anggara Manisé. . ." The narrative is woven from a variety of textual sources, including:

1) Jangka Jayabaya (MS pp. 1–8);
2) Kitab Musarar (MS pp. 8–17);
3) Serat Manikmaya (MS pp. 17–133).

The "Manikmaya" portion of the text opens with the tale of the ascension of the Just King to the throne of Java in the year 140, continues with the tales of Aji Saka and of Bathara Guru's reign on earth, coming finally to the Makukuhan rice origin story. Poem ends with the transformation of Déwi Sri and her brother Radèn Sadana into a snake and bird respectively.

MS/poem is dated Anggara Manis, Watugunung, 23 Mulud Dal 1815 (29 December 1885), sangkala: "osiking [5? usually 6] tyas [1] ngèsthi [8] Sri Bupati [1]." The dating is inconsistent: 23 Mulud Dal 1815 falls in wuku Landhep rather than wuku Watugunung.

The scribe (and perhaps the author as well) signs his name backwards "Ya-wir-su-ngun-ma" on MS p. i.

Prose history of classical Java (solar years 800–17). The text features the adventures of Prabu Gendrayana, king of Ngastina; Prabu Widdhayana (a.k.a. Jayapurusa), king of Kadhiri-Mamenang; Prabu Yudayaka, king of Ngastina and Ywangastina; and Prabu Sariwahana, king of Ywangastina. When the kingdom of Ngastina is destroyed by fire, Prabu Gendrayana and Resi Siddhikara vanish into perfection (muksa). The god Narada then comes and orders Gendrayana's son, Narayana, to build a new kingdom in Pamenang. He becomes king Widdhayana of the new kingdom of Kadhiri-Mamenang. Meanwhile, Gendrayana's brother, Harya Prabu Sudarsana, ascends the throne of Ywangastina as Prabu Yudayaka. When Yudayaka retires, he is succeeded by his son Sariwahana. On MS p. i, is a brief précis of volume's contents.

Islamic romance. Ménak

The heroic and amorous adventures of Tiyang Agung Ménak (Amir Hamza), an uncle of the Prophet Mohammad. The tale is of Arabic-Persian origin and was rendered in macapat verse by Yasadipura I upon commission of Pakubuwana III (r. 1749–88). See Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, pp. 212–14 and 242–43, for general introductory remarks on the Ménak Amir Hamza epic. For a philological treatise on literary renditions of Javanese Ménak tales, see Poerbatjaraka, Beschrijving der Handschriften: Ménak (Bandung: Nix, 1940).

This volume opens in Dhangdhanggula with the MS dating and a lengthy copyist's apology; the opening line reads: "Rikalanya murwèng Tumpak Manis, tanggal pisan ing pukul satunggal."

This volume forms an introduction to the epic. The narrative opens with the ascetic practices of Prabu Saréhas of Madayin and continues through the tale of Radèn Lamdahur, the adoptive son of Prabu Sahalsah of Surandil. The text corresponds to the published edition vol. I, cantos 1–65; see Pratèlan I, pp. 229–39 for synopses of these cantos.

Vol. opens in Asmarandana: "Kuneng kang samya angungsi." On MS p. i, is a brief précis of volume's contents. Beginning with Tiyang Agung Ménak's arrival in the country of Ngrokam, volume continues up to the defeat of the country of Jaminambar. This volume corresponds to the edition published in Batavia in 1854: vol. VIII, cantos 9–65. For synopses of these cantos, see Pratélan I, pp. 327–35.

Volume is apparently the final volume of a (now) incomplete series that was inscribed for Mangkunagara IV circa 1860. Of the extant volumes, this MS alone has a copy date. MS dated (pp. 381–82): Kemis Legi, Sinta, 19 Sapar Jimawal Sengara 1789 (6 September 1860). The sangkala, "diwara sebdanira, pra bujongga: kuda titihaning ratu," seems to ask to be read as 1778 [bhujongga = 8, kuda = 7, titihan = 7, ratu = 1). But AJ 1778 is Jimakir, not Jimawal, and it falls in windu Adi rather than windu Sengara. Furthermore, Mangkunagara IV did not assume the Mangkunagara title until AJ 1786 (having assumed rule as "Prangwadana" in AJ 1781).

Author: Yasadipura I, R. Ng. (1729–1803)
Composed: Surakarta, [ca. 1749–88]
Inscribed: [Batavia], 1927
vol. I of [6]: i, 495 pp.; 21.5 x 16.7 cm.
Islamic romance. Ménak

The heroic and amorous adventures of Tiyang Agung Ménak (Amir Hamza), an uncle of the Prophet Mohammad. The tale is of Arabic-Persian origin and was rendered in macapat verse by Yasadipura I upon commission of Pakubuwana III (r. 1749–88). See Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, pp. 212–14 and 242–43, for general introductory remarks on the Ménak Amir Hamza epic. For a philological treatise on literary renditions of Javanese Ménak tales, see Poerbatjaraka, Beschrijving der Handschriften: Ménak (Bandung: Nix, 1940).

The volume opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Sanggyaningkang panjalwèng dasih." This volume introduces the epic. Beginning with the ascetic practices of Prabu Saréhas of Madayin, it continues through the birth and youth of Amir Hamza up to his marriage to Déwi Muninggar, princess of Madayin. Volume corresponds to the edition published in Batavia in 1854: vol. I, canto 1 to vol. II, canto 22. See Pratélan I, pp. 230–46 for synopses of these cantos.

Text is dated 1 Dulkangidah Bé 1760 (22 March 1833), sangkala: "tar [0] osik [6] sabdèng [7] ratu [1]." MS appears to have been copied from a published edition (Batavia, 1854 or 1883–89). The 1854 edition (reissued 1883–89) was prepared by C. F. Winter from a MS commissioned by Pakubuwana VII in AJ 1760 and produced under Winter's supervision (LOr 1787).

Cursive script. The hand is the same as that inscribing a Carita Johar Manik MS (Reksa Pustaka MS. O 94) that was recently acquired along with this Ménak series. Filming of the Johar Manik MS , which was produced in Batavia in 1930, was precluded owing to the extreme tightness of volume's (new) binding. This MS is dated 1927.

The heroic and amorous adventures of Tiyang Agung Ménak (Amir Hamza), an uncle of the Prophet Mohammad. The tale is of Arabic-Persian origin and was rendered in macapat verse by Yasadipura I upon commission of Pakubuwana III (r. 1749–88). See notes to MN 513 above.

Volume opens in Pangkur, with a copyist's apology: "Pundhènnya Pangkur pustaka, sasmitané ing driya kang ginupit." Narrative begins with the conversion to Islam of the armies of Jaminambar and ends with a description of the transmission (ultimately to Java and to Yasadipura I) of the Ménak epic. Excepting its beginning stanzas and final four cantos, this volume corresponds to the edition published in Batavia in 1854: vol. VIII, cantos 65–79. See Pratélan I, pp. 335–36 for synopses of these cantos. The four cantos at the close of this volume (pp. 158 ff.) that diverge from the published edition are composed in the Gambuh, Durma, Asmarandana, and Dhangdhanggula metres (see also MN 519.1 below).

A branch tale associated with the Ménak Amir Hamza epic. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Durma: "Purwanipun Serat Rengganis punika." The text focuses on the romance of Déwi Rengganis and Pangéran Kélan (Ménak's son). See Poerbatjaraka, Kapustakan Djawi, pp. 111–19, for synopsis of, and commentary on, the tale. Poerbatjaraka speculates that the original tale was composed during the Kartasura period (1680–1745), perhaps by Rongga Janur.

See also MS p. i, for a concise précis of volume's contents. The précis is signed (signature indecipherable) and dated 10 September 1928. It was apparently made by a servant of the Mangkunagaran court who was reviewing the MS for his prince. The reviewer (presumably advising that the MS be purchased) notes that the prince does not yet have an exemplar of this text.

Composed: Surakarta, [early 19th c., mid 19th c.?]

Historical romance. Mataram - Pranacitra-Jaka Pangasih

Historical romance set in seventeenth-century Mataram. Macapat verse. Text opens in Dhangdhanggula: "Purwaning rèh sarkara kinapti, Sukra Wagé salikur kang tanggal." The poem, in a form that could be characterized as "novelistic," treats two tales of romantic love, both of which are set in Mataram at the time of Sultan Agung (r. 1613–45). The first section of the poem (pp. 1–273) treats the ill-fated romance of Pranacitra and Lara Mendhut. Serat Pranacitra was published separately by C. F. Winter posthumously in 1888. The text of MS pp. 1–273 appears to correspond to the published version; for synopses of cantos see Pratélan I, pp. 361–65. The second section of the text (MS pp. 274–492) composing a sequel to Serat Pranacitra, treats the romance of R. Jaka Pangasih (son of the Patih of Mataram) and the village maiden Rara Sepranti. Authorship of both portions of the text are usually attributed to the Surakarta court poet Yasadipura II (Sastranagara), who was active in the early nineteenth century. However, in his article, "De Waarde van de Serat Djakapangasih" in Djawa XIII (1933) pp. 130–34, Sastrasoewignja doubts that attribution for the Jaka Pangasih portion of the text. On the basis of style and Surakarta oral traditions, he instead attributes authorship of the Jaka Pangasih to Pangéran Cakradiningrat, a grandson of Pakubuwana VII (sic) [that is V] and son-in-law of Pakubuwana VI.

Serat Kawi Jawi
Author: Suryawijaya, Radèn Panji
Compiled: Batavia, [ca. 1868–69]
Inscribed: Batavia, [ca. 1868–69]
Scribe: Suryawijaya, Radèn Panji
xi, 378 pp.; 21 x 14.5 cm.
Compilation
Compilation of notes and texts (twenty-two items) prepared by R. Panji Suryawijaya, ca. 1868–69 (see dated signature on p. 635). Suryawijaya, of Surakarta origin, lived for a number of years in Batavia as personal secretary to the Dutch philologist, A. B. Cohen Stuart. Many of the collected notes concern Javanese and Kawi language.
On the unnumbered front pages are:
1. Birth registers for the years AJ 1780–97 (AD 1851–68) (pp. i, iii).
2. Draft of a letter to Governor General Baron Sloet van de Beele, who served 1861–66 (p. ii).
3. Partial table of contents (MS pp. iv–vi).
4. List of "witnesses" (p. vi).

5. Names of Javanese mountains and their heights (pp. vii–viii).
6. List of the names of Kings of Siam (p. ix).
7. A panegyric to the colonial government (pp. ix–xi).

The hand is like that of texts inscribed at the Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn.

Volume is in deplorable condition. Many leaves are missing, and many others have been reduced to fragments (which were repieced for filming when possible).

MS leaves are numbered as follows: MS I: 1–657 (missing pages: 37–72, 79–86, 89–98, 123–28, 273–74, 277–510, 537–44). MS II: 66–90 (bound in volume upside-down). Two additional unnumbered pages at volume's end.

History. Java, Karaton Surakarta - 1847

Text of a speech delivered by Pakubuwana VII (r. 1830–58) on 11 February 1847, upon the installation of Sasradiningrat III as patih of the Karaton Surakarta. The Sunan's speech outlines the duties and responsibilities of the patih. Notably, the speech repeatedly cautions the assembled nobles against financial abuses against the common folk (wong cilik).

Literary studies. Prosody
Classical literary tales. Wrettasancaya
The Kekawin Wrettasancaya (also called Cakrawâka Duta) forms a treatise on kekawin metres. The treatise is composed in the form of a romantic tale in which a duck carries the messages of a pining girl to her wayward lover. The poem was composed by Empu Tanakung, mid to late 15th c. See Zoetmulder, Kalangwan, pp. 104 ff. and Pigeaud, Literature of Java, vol. I, p. 189.
A very cryptic copyist note on MS p. 14 reads: "Tlas sinurat, ring dina, su, ka, Watugunung, titi kresna paksa ri dasa mi, pongya [?] ma, sa, Isaka 1741. Rah, nga, tenggak." Drawn on the second line following "tenggak" is a serpentine figure that is reminiscent of the bujangga figure that the Pujongga Ronggawarsita used as part of his signature.
Isaka 1741 would be 1819. If the text was inscribed by Ronggawarsita, the 1819 copy date is unlikely, however.
Small Karaton Surakarta Kadipatèn script; rather more rounded than Ronggawarsita's usual hand.

Serat Sam Kok = Babad Sam Kok (MN 556–564)

Author: Anonymous

Composed: [s.l.], 1890

Inscribed: [Surakarta?, late 19th–early 20th c.]

9 vols. (Vols. I–IX of 9)

Chinese historical romance in macapat verse: Romance of the Three Kingdoms. The romance relates the third-century history of the final years the later Han (the great kingdom of "Tèh Han") and the interdynastic strife that followed upon its fragmentation.

This Javanese macapat version of the romance was composed/translated from a Malay rendering of the originally Chinese tale, and is dated 20 August 1890 (see below, notes to MN 556). Claudine Salmon mentions a Javanese verse translation of the Sam Kok romance which was produced in late-nineteenth century by a certain R. Gunawan of Maospati, Madiyun (Literary Migrations: Traditional Chinese Fiection in Asia (17th–20th centuries) [Beijing: The Foreign Languages Printing House, 1987], pp. 378–81). For more on redactions of this popular Chinese tale in the Malay world, see Salmon, "The Three Kingdoms in the Malay World--Religion and Literature," Asian Culture 16 (June 1992), pp. 14–34.

Note: There seems to be a hiatus between vol. III and vol. IV; vol. VIII–IX are inscribed in a different (apparently slightly younger) hand than the preceding seven volumes and may not in fact belong to this series.

All volumes in tooled leather bindings.

Court, Java. Archives - 0800–1800s - - Land administration

Based upon R. Ng. Ronggawarsita's Pustaka Raja Wéddha, or Serat Babad Sangkala Ageng, the text is a discussion of Javanese land administration from the ninth-century [sic] reign of Prabu Jayabaya in Kedhiri to the accession of Pakubuwana VII to the throne of Surakarta in 1830. Among other things, the text discusses the Javanese units of measure for population and land, cacah and lungguh; and reviews the duties of royal officials in court and countryside. Prose.

Copy is dated 15 Sawal Jimawal 1861 (9 March 1931), and is signed by Pranasusastra.

Court, Karaton Surakarta. Ceremony - Sekar Wijayakusuma
History. Java - 1580s, 1613
History of the magical flower, Sekar Wijayakusuma, which is fetched from an island off the southern coast of Java (near Cilacap) upon the accession of a new king to the throne of the Karaton Surakarta. The first part of the text comprises the teachings of Kangjeng Ratu Kidul, spirit queen of the South Sea to Panembahan Sénapati, founder of the Mataram dynasty. The spirit queen relates to her human lover the history of the flower and its connection with Javanese kingship. The second portion of the text relates the story of Sultan Agung's acquisition of the flower.

382 pp.; 30 x 21.5 cm.
Compilation

Compilation of nine texts. The volume appears to have been compiled over a number of years; see the possible copy date, "kala binangun 5 Sawal Dal 1719" (16 May 1793) on MS p. 14 verso. On MS p. 103 verso are a series of dates AJ 1757–67 (1831–40); including a note indicating a passage of 1308 years since the birth of the Prophet Mohammad "dumugi Dal iki" (i.e., Dal 1767).

The initial seven leaves of the volume are missing.

MS is inscribed in several hands: quadratic and cursive Surakarta scripts of the early- and mid-nineteenth century). Text is inscribed on dluwang (Ponorogo bark paper); many leaves are severely damaged from insect infestation.

MS leaves double-page numbered 8–205; no. p.# 80–81, 88, 94, 98; p. # 96 (verso) and p.# 97 are upside-down; two loose un-numbered leaves inserted between pp. 97 and 99. The original page numbering (top of page) following p.# 99 is erratic. Read the binding sequence from the new penciled numbers in the lower right corner of the page.

The compositions are notated by writing out in full the names of the pitches in columns. This notational form probably predates the modified staff and cipher notation systems that were adopted in the late nineteenth century. See Kunst, Music in Java, Vol. I, p. 346 ff. on Javanese musical notation systems.

Music. Gamelan - Gendhing

Kapatihan cipher notation of the skeletal melodies (balungan) of 179 gendhing for gamelan in the Surakarta style: 154 gendhing in sléndro tuning (MS I) and 25 gendhing in pélog tuning (MS II). On MS p. i, the writer is identified as "miji pangrebab kiwa" of the Karaton Surakarta. According to the late R. Ng. Martopangrawit, Ki Gondapangrawit held this position under Pakubuwana IX (r. 1861–93). The script, however, appears to date from the early 20th century (ca. 1910s).

Latin long-hand script with Arabic ciphers. The titles are in a large quadratic Javanese script.

Treatise on wirèng dance. Macapat verse. Poem opens in Mijil: "Sangking mijil kumedah mèngeti, ton tuman tumonton." Attribution of authorship from a sandi-asma in the opening stanza. Text opens with a concise history of the form, naming wirèng dances created by Pakubuwana IV (r. 1788–1820). Following this prefatory history is a choreography of the wirèng dance Panji Nom. The verse choreography is provided with another sandi-asma for Tondhakusuma. At the end of the choreography, the writer acknowledges his topèng teacher, "Jeng Pangran Pati Ngabéhi" (Pakubuwana VIII), and his fellow students: K.G.P.A.A. Amangkunagara IV (Pakubuwana IX), Pangéran Kusumadilaga, and Pangéran Singasari (all of the Karaton Surakarta).
